District traffic deaths this year 55
Deaths this date last year... 53
Total traffic deaths, 1948..... 67

Ten persons died over the weekend in a wave of traffic accidents in Washington and Maryland and more than a dozen others were injured.

In the District, the traffic death toll, which on Saturday passed last year's mark for the first time, rose again yesterday when another fatality was recorded in the city.

Five persons died in a single spectacular crash early Sunday near Sunderland, Md., in Calvert County near North Beach. The car burned fiercely immediately after it stopped rolling.

Victims in all 10 traffic accidents were:

Irving Wright, 35, of 1127 2d st. se., dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital after an auto-streetcar collision at 3d st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. early yesterday.

Lawrence H. Matthews, 20, of 619 6th st. ne., died when an auto skidded, sheared off a light pole and overturned near Bladensburg, Md.

Mrs. Catherine Ontiveros, 22, a waitress, formerly of 1122 13th st. nw., killed in the same accident as Matthews.

George E. Sollers, 34, Owings, Md., killed when his speeding auto struck a bridge rail and culvert, rolled over and burned near Sunderland.

Mrs. Thelma G. Mackall, 23, sister of Charles Sollers, Huntingtown, killed in the same crash.

John Thomas Pullen, 15, of 6811 Riggs rd., Riggs Manor, Md., died Saturday night at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, after a motor scooter-truck accident Saturday at 48th ave. and Greenbelt rd., Branchville, Md.

George A. Perkins, 52, of 232 L st. sw., died at Casualty Hospital Saturday of injuries suffered when he was struck by an auto Thursday in the 600 block of 3rd st. nw.

Police said the accident in which Wright died occurred at 12:25 a. m. yesterday. An auto driven by James Tyson, 31, of 605 56th st. ne., collided with the streetcar, driven by George A. Girth, 52, of 701 Sterling rd., Silver Spring, Md., at 3d st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. Tyson and his wife, Vivian, 31, were both taken to Casualty Hospital and reported in serious condition from head injuries.

Three passengers on the streetcar were treated at Emergency Hospital for minor injuries and released. They were Paula Smith, 40, of 1 2d st. ne.; Clara Brown,

B-36 Finds 3 Friends in House Group

Representatives Still Favor Bomber Despite Criticisms Made by Admirals

By The Associated Press

Three members of the House Armed Services Committee said yesterday they still were for the B-36 bomber in spite of the Navy's low opinion of it.

They are Representatives Price (D., Ill.), Brooks (D., La.) and Kilday (D., Tex.).

The committee is refereeing a Pentagon dispute over air war strategy and handling of unification. It has heard the Navy's side and will turn to the other services in public hearings this week.

A fourth member, Representative Bates (R., Mass.), told a reporter the Air Force ought to be allowed to develop the giant intercontinental bomber at least to the point where its true value as a weapon can be determined.

Admirals Want Carrier

Top admirals have been following the same line as Bates, while criticizing the heavy B-36 purchase program, but by the same token, they say, the Navy ought to be allowed to go ahead with a supercarrier.

But Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) declared that before billions are invested in a B-36 or a supercarrier there should be at once a secret but full-fledged test of the B-36 "to find out whether it is as invincible as the Air Force says it is or as vulnerable as the Navy says it is."

Senator Smith, interviewed for radio by the Gannett News Service, also gave her formula for stopping "this quarreling and bickering among the services:"

1. Permit interservice transfers—"especially permit naval aviation personnel to transfer to the Air Force." She said this would lead to real team spirit.

2. Put every branch in one color of uniform.

Smith Calls B-36 Our Best

Price took this position:

"In the face of the necessity of preparing for another war, we've got to have an intercontinental bomber. At the moment the B-36 is the best we have.

"I don't want to bomb cities. No one does. But the intercontinental bomber is here and we'd better have one because the other fellow is going to."

Kilday said he is for "the mostest and bestest" weapons and the B-36 is the best long-range bomber we have.

"Why certainly we need the B-36," Brooks said. "Nobody has presented a suitable alternative."

Navy men say the atom-bombing B-36 has become a symbol for a kind of warfare that is wrong. They contend it would mean destroying whole cities and slaughtering civilians.

Meanwhile, Gens. Clifton B. Cates and A. A. Vandegrift of the United States Marine Corps go before the committee today to conclude the Navy's complaints against unification.

Alcoa Strike Pulls 16,000 Workers Out

Half of Company's Output Affected; Idle in 3 Disputes Placed at 1 Million

Pittsburgh, (Monday) Oct. 17 (AP). — Sixteen thousand CIO aluminum workers struck today as the Nation reeled from its first twin steel and coal strikes.

The combined strikes have made nearly one million workers idle.

There is not a sign of peace in either the steel or coal walkouts. Government negotiators, however, are continuing their efforts.

William N. Margolis of the United States Conciliation and Mediation Service, made a futile eleventh-hour attempt to head off the strike of the CIO United Steelworkers Union against Alumnium Co. of America. He flew here but returned to Washington and an Alcoa spokesman said his visit accomplished nothing.

Company Blames Union

An Alcoa spokesman said the company "again expressed willingness to work out details of a settlement and postponement of the strike action," but that the union refused to go along.

CIO and United Steelworker President Philip Murray said settlement of the two-week-old steel strike is now "in the lap of the gods."

Alcoa reported negotiations collapsed Friday night over the steelworkers' refusal to accept a provision that a proposed pension plan be subjected to any future adjustment in Federal Social Security laws.

The aluminum company said it met the steelworkers' demands for 6 cents for pensions and 4 cents for insurance.

Same Issue as in Steel

The pension and insurance demand is the same one that shut down the steel industry.

Some 16,000 CIO members in nine Alcoa plants across the Nation struck at 12:01 a. m.

Murray said the union did not break off the Alcoa negotiations. He charged that a company statement to that effect amounted to a "lockout of its workers," and that the union was willing to resume talks at any time.

50% of Production Affected

Murray declared the Alcoa pension proposal "would have led to a reduction in the company's pitifully inadequate retirement payment to its old employes."

Alcoa makes one half the world's aluminum. Only 50 percent of its production will be affected by a walkout. Employes at 16 other company plants are represented by different unions.

The steel strike broadened today to include some fabricating companies whose contracts expired at midnight. The fabricator contracts expire on dates staggered from October 15 to December 15.

AFL Rejects Lewis Bid to Close Ranks

By the United Press

Officials of the American Federation of Labor yesterday turned down a suggestion that they pool the AFL's resources with those of the United Mine Workers and the Congress of Industrial Organizations to set up a joint "strike fund."

They added, however, that individual AFL unions probably would give financial assistance to the striking CIO steel workers or the United Mine Workers if they are asked for it.

AFL President William Green was not available for comment on the "strike fund" proposal, made first by UMW President John L. Lewis and then by President Philip Murray of the steel workers.

Farm Measure Salvage Move Falls Flat

Both High and Low Price Support Camps Refuse to Budge

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Last ditch efforts to salvage a farm bill in Congress' closing hours yesterday met with refusals of both high and low price support adherents to budge from their programs.

A Sunday morning effort to smooth out some of the bitterest points in dispute reportedly came to nothing. First, some of the Conference Committee members were in church in the morning. When they got home, others, who had consented in the morning to listen, had gone to the football game.

As a step toward ironing out the tangle, Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) offered a proposal that got immediate response from high-support advocates. He suggested that farm price supports should be mandatory on basic commodities at 90 percent of parity for one year, then 85 percent for a year, and then 80 percent. After that a sliding scale of supports would become effective.

Ellender thought the high-support-price House members might go for his program today, but proponents—those who would talk of flexible support ranges wouldn't listen to the suggestion. One said that it was "the Republican emergency measure all over again."

In fact, the impasse that farm legislation has found itself in, is a repetition of last year.

The disagreement between the House, insistent upon the Gore bill it has already passed, and the Senate, equally as insistent upon its Anderson bill, is almost a duplication of the row between the two houses in June, 1948, on the same subject.

A year ago the Republican-controlled Congress, frantic for a farm bill for the upcoming presidential campaign, reached a compromise. It was the simplest form of compromise. Congress adopted both bills. The House, or Hope bill, providing for continuation of the wartime rate of price supports of 90 percent of parity, was adopted for one year. The Aiken bill, for a sliding scale of price guarantees for farm products, ranging from 72 to 90 percent, was to become law January 1, 1950.

Republican leaders, confident that they would be even stronger in control after the November election, agreed in passing the Hope-

Secretary Sees Jobless At 5 Million By December

Upward Trend Already Reversed; Business Failures Held As Likely

By the United Press

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer yesterday warned five million men will be thrown out of jobs and thousands of small businessmen forced to the wall if the steel strike continues until December 1.

In a special Sunday statement summing up the possible economic impact of the two-week-old shutdown, he asserted somberly that the stoppage already had reversed the upward business and employment trend and that now the Nation's welfare is at stake.

He foresaw two million unemployed in steel and industries dependent on steel if the walkout is not ended by November 1, and thereafter shutdowns in mass production industries such as autos, machinery, electric appliances, construction and metal containers.

"By December 1, if the strike continues," he said, "unemployment directly attributable to the strike will be approximately five million. Furthermore, it is estimated that by January 1 there will, in effect, be a complete shutdown in the metal-consuming industries."

Government labor experts see little chance of a steel accord before the CIO convention meets in Cleveland October 31—two weeks from today. At the same time the United Mine Workers Journal said Lewis will not consider ordering his coal miners back to the pits until he wins contract improvements averaging at least 30 cents a ton.

Lewis charged in the Journal over the weekend that the "steel interests" have ordered that any agreement on a coal contract be delayed until the steel walkout is settled.

Sawyer devoted his entire statement to the steel walkout. He said:

"Until about two weeks ago, during practically the entire summer there was a definite upward trend in business and employment. That trend has been changed by strikes and threats of strikes.

"The steel strike, which began October 15, has resulted in a curtailment in steel production to 10 percent of capacity. At the beginning of the strike, the average inventories of steel products in the hands of the metal-consuming industries were estimated to be sufficient to last until approximately November 15.

"Should the strike continue, it is expected that shortly after that date 80 percent of the production of these steel-consuming industries will be lost, with serious damage to the Nation's economy.

Spread to Other Industries

"From estimates made by the Department of Commerce, based on recent surveys, it appears that even by November 1 the strike, if continued, will cause the unem-

Navy Clerk Held in Death Of Boy in Park

Tests Disclose Stains Of Blood; He Denies Knowledge of Slaying

A 35-year-old Navy statistical clerk, a graduate of Howard University, was held by police yesterday as a suspect in the brutal murder a week ago of 8-year-old Harrison McKinley Walker.

The boy's body, bearing 17 stab wounds, four skull fractures and evidence of sexual abuse, was found last Sunday in Rock Creek, near Pennsylvania ave. and 27th st. nw. The boy was the son of Mrs. Marie Walker, 2454 Snow's ct. nw., which is about five blocks from the scene of the murder. The man held lives in the same neighborhood.

The suspect, who police said admitted yesterday that he is a pervert, denied any knowledge of the murder.

By laboratory tests, police found latent bloodstains on his hands, arms, and body. The man, unaware that the stains were present until police tests disclosed them, said the blood had probably come from ticks which he picked off collie dogs. He has several such dogs.

The man told police that he has frequently walked his dogs in Rock Creek Park, in the vicinity where Harrison was murdered, but denied doing so on the Friday which Harrison disappeared from the Briggs-Montgomery School, or the next day, which is when police believe the boy was murdered.

He furnished a story of his movements on Friday, and said that on the Saturday in question he attended the opening of the new Whitehurst Freeway in the vicinity of the murder. On his later movements Saturday, he was so vague that officers have not yet been able to check them.

Police said the man had been arrested several times on minor charges, but only once in a case of perversion. They said that occurred last July in Rock Creek Park when the suspect and a soldier were caught in the act. The case was turned over to military authorities and police will not be able to obtain records of the disposition of it until today.

Police said the man is well educated and comes from a good family. They will hold him at least until they check records of the perversion case.

Prague Terror Continues

Weeping Czechs Besiege Jails In Hunt for Kin Seized by Reds

Prague, Oct. 16 (AP).—Hundreds of weeping Czechs poured into Prague's prisons and police stations today in anguished search for friends and relatives snatched up in big-scale arrests in the past two weeks.

Reliable informants said these arrests were continuing. Some Prague people reported they had seen several large police vans emptying at prisons people seized in night raids. The Communist-dominated government was reported cracking down in a final effort to liquidate the middle class and complete nationalization of small business and industry.

The world of sports was not immune. Czechoslovakia wrecked its world champion amateur hockey team by firing three leading players on the grounds they were "politically unreliable."

Many relatives of arrested people who inquired today at police stations were turned away without information.

In sad lines they began assembling early in the morning, some dressed in their Sunday best, others in work clothes. Many women carried knitting in anticipation of long waits.

The parents of a young girl arrested about 12 days ago arrived at Bartolomejska Street police headquarters — site of a large prison—at about 8 a. m.

The courtyard and anterooms of the police station were already filled with people, all carrying suitcases or paper packages containing food parcels.

They had been told previously that if the food parcel was accepted it meant the arrested person was being held at that prison.

In a little while the girl's par-

Reds' Drive Splits China Into 3 Parts

Hongkong, Oct. 16 (AP).—Communist columns sweeping through the Canton region to the South China Sea have split Nationalist China into three widely separated centers of resistance.

Several minor Nationalist positions, such as the island city of Amoy and the Chushan Islands, are under assaults that threaten their quick liquidation.

Other Nationalist fronts are buckling under the pressure of Red armies, spurred on by the unopposed occupation of Canton Saturday.

About 500,000 Nationalist troops confront the attackers, who outnumber them at least four to one.

Chungking, 600 air miles northwest of Canton and new seat of the Nationalist Government, is one of the major defense centers. Guarding the northern and eastern approaches to Chungking's Szechwan Province are about 175,000 troops under Gens. Hu Tsung-nan and Sung Hai-lien.

Centered at Kweilin, 250 miles northwest of Canton, is the best Nationalist force, an estimated 200,000 men under Gen. Pai Chung-hsi.

More than 350 miles southeast of Chungking, Pai is nominally linked with that center, but for all practical purposes is isolated.

Rep. Celler Asks Release of Film On Nazi Atrocities

By the United Press

Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) said yesterday that anti-semitism is cropping out again in Germany. He urged the Army to release its horror film, "Nurenberg," to refresh the public's memory of Nazi atrocities.

The Congressman, in a letter, accused Undersecretary of the Army Tracy S. Voorhees of "suppressing" the film, which he said contains official Nazi pictures of "the massacre of the Jews in the burning of the Warsaw ghetto."

Union Votes End Of Singer Strike After 168 Days

Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 16.—Striking Singer Manufacturing Co. workers today voted to end their 168-day-old strike.

They accepted a new contract that provides no general wage increase and retains the disputed standards or incentive pay system.

The one-year contract between the company and Local 401, CIO United Electrical Workers will be signed at the Elizabeth plant Monday. The 9000 employes probably will be back on the job by Friday, the company said.

Local 401 leaders said today a "betrayal" by UE leaders at the Bridgeport (Conn.) Singer plant had "ruined" their efforts to form a better contract.

'Silent' Sen. Smith Has Last Word About Last Word

She offered this as evidence to "disprove the slander that women talk incessantly" and to support her contention the Republicans should nominate a woman for President or Vice President in 1952.

Mrs. Smith didn't name the other four "silent" Senators, but an assistant said the Congressional Record in mid-September showed she and Chapman (D., Ky.), Miller (D., Idaho), Wagner (D., N. Y.) and Young (R., N. Dak.) had consumed less time with talk this year than other Senators.

Since the study was made Miller has died. Wagner has retired and Young and Chapman have both "spoken extensively," so that Mrs. Smith "is probably the least talkative of all now," he said.

2 Feet High on the Hoof

Midget Cattle Toss Experts To Horns of a Fine Dilemma

Animal husbandrymen found themselves on the horns of a fine dilemma yesterday, stuck for an explanation of the dwarf cattle removed Friday from a lonely canyon in the West.

Unanimously rejected by experts and laymen alike was the theory that there at long last were the condensed cows that produced all this condensed milk.

Similarly eyed with dubiety was the random thought that the minute Herefords were responsible for minute steaks.

But men who know the bovine best were hard put to come up with the right steer.

Dr. Gordon M. Cairns, professor of dairy husbandry at the University of Maryland, suggested that the cattle may have been dwarfed by years of scarce feed, in much the same way that the Shetland pony developed from the horse.

Dr. John S. Foster, professor of animal husbandry, said he was frankly baffled, but suggested that a group of recessive genes might have run amuck in the herd.

Dr. Willard Green, professor of animal breeding, hazarded a guess that the cattle were suffering from a pituitary or thyroid deficiency, similar to that which produces human midgets.

Meanwhile, in Jamestown, N. Dak., animal trainer Gene Holter, who removed the cattle by helicopter, locked his barn door on the tiny animals which stand only from 24 to 25 inches tall and weigh from 150 to 225 pounds. A normal Hereford stands 55 inches high and weighs 2200 pounds.

Holter said he had sold exclusive rights to a national magazine and planned to exhibit the animals as freaks.

Holter also revealed the dwarf cattle, three bulls and two cows, which give no milk, "are crazy for salt" and try to drink too much water. He said they drink so much they become bloated.

Two veterinarians inspected the animals yesterday and confirmed that they are perfectly formed and mature Herefords. Holter plans to remove the entire herd of about 20 head, all of them dwarfs, but some smaller and some bigger than the captured five. But he refused to disclose its location, except to say that it was 1000 miles from North Dakota.

Dr. Foster said he doubted that Herefords had been in America long enough, much less in the lost canyon long enough, for them to have become dwarfed by any genetic process. Such a procedure requires hundreds of years," he said.

The first Herefords were brought to this country by statesman Henry Clay in 1817, it was pointed out. He imported two bulls and two heifers to his Kentucky farm, according to Dr. Cairns.

Occasionally a genetic throw-

Smithsonian Discovery

Ruins Disclose 'Intellectuals' Lived in Arctic 500 Years Ago

Pictograph records on whalebone found in stone ruins on far-northern Cornwallis Island in the Canadian Artic are regarded by the Smithsonian Institution as "conclusive evidence" the North Polar region was once inhabited by "a race of intellectuals."

Dr. Harry B. Collins, jr., of the Smithsonian staff, and an assistant, J. P. Michea of the National Museum of Canada, made the discovery this summer while probing the ruins of four ancient villages in a region now entirely uninhabited.

They estimated yesterday that the villages were built more than 500 years ago by the Thules, a nomadic but highly civilized tribe of Eskimos that had its origin in northern Alaska.

Among relics found was a whalebone "snow knife" on which was inscribed the pictorial story of a whale hunt. It shows a typical Eskimo "umiak" in which four hunters are pursuing a bowhead whale—a mammal now extinct. Other pictographs show realistically drawn caribou and geese, proving the Thules were accomplished artists.

Unique among the finds were a combination stone and pottery lamp made of a limestone slab and a sealskin bag containing whale blubber.

Among other discoveries were a wide range of implements made of bone, ivory, stone and wood.

Collins said the "culture must have flourished at a time when conditions in the Arctic were better suited to human habitation than is the case today."

Harried D. C. Wife Describes Mistaken Identity Nightmare

Resemblance to the girl friend of a dead gangster has given Evelyn Verges, former movie player and wife of a Washington doctor, "the most miserable three weeks of my life," she said yesterday.

Mrs. Verges returned to Washington from Barcelona, Spain, early yesterday morning after a vacation cut short by notoriety and insults from persons who were convinced she was Virginia Hill, glamorous friend of the late Benjamin "Buggsy" Siegel.

Mrs. Verges told The Washington Post she left New York with her two children on September 23 for an extended vacation. She had intended to place the children in Barcelona schools and continue on to Italy, where she was to be given an audience with the Pope, and visit with relatives.

The planned vacation became a nightmare, she said, as a result of a Sunday broadcast by a New York commentator that Virginia Hill had boarded the steamship Atlantic at the last minute under an alias.

Mrs. Verges herself had boarded Atlantic, with 4 trunks and 15 suitcases, a few minutes before the big liner left.

Until New York newspapers cabled queries to the captain of the vessel, Mrs. Verges said the trip across had been "wonderful fun."

"We had a very congenial group," she said, "including Alan

Bacon Is Uppish

Pork Chops Off 12 Cents In Month

Pork roast also is almost 10 cents lower.

But bacon, failing to follow the pork trend, is a little higher in price, and beef cuts are about the same.

The United Press surveyed current retail meat prices in 20 representative cities and those of a month ago after the arrival of a bumper spring pig crop at livestock markets beginning last month tumbled the price of pork-on-the-hoof.

Production estimates of the meat industry for the remainder of this year and next showed a rosy prospect of plentiful meat in all classes except lamb.

United States Department of Agriculture analysts believed that the prospect of good supplies meant a long run of cheaper meat, although they did not expect sensational price decreases.

The survey, however, showed that pork was now a better buy for the housewife. Center-cut chops, for example, were 20 cents a pound cheaper in Chicago than they were a month ago, and 18 cents cheaper in Philadelphia.

Bacon apparently was slow in following the pork trend, and Grade A slices were a little more than 3 cents a pound higher, on the average. T-bone steaks were down a bit, but rib roast and chuck roast were slightly higher.

The experts believed that a strong demand for good grades of beef was holding up the price.

2 Extra Chops Promised On 'Pig of Tomorrow'

Gray Summit, Mo., Oct. 16 (U.P.). Scientists are developing a "pig of tomorrow" that will supply two extra pork chops and won't know a hog wallow from Buckingham Palace.

At the experimental farm of the Ralston Purina Co. here, the swine of the future is in many stages of growth. The exact breeding formula hasn't been found yet.

But Purina researchers said the new American pig will come equipped with two more ribs. He'll be born in a "hog hatchery," where he will not be permitted to wallow in mud. And he'll produce half again as much lard, turn out prime hams, lean bacon and more meat on the spareribs.

He'll have air-conditioning in summer and radiant heat in winter.

The scientists said Mama Pig should produce more than her average two litters each year.

So far, Purina and Krey Packing Co. of St. Louis have made a good start.

Their revised Yorkshire already has two more pork chops than most breeds.

Dignified officials of the Federal Reserve Board don't like to crow, "I told you so," but:

Just as they predicted last spring, the days of "a-dollar-down-and-a-dollar-a-week-forever" installment buying are fast returning.

The board warned it would happen if its famed regulation W—which kept a brake on easy credit during the war and postwar inflation—was allowed to expire. But a recession-fearing Congress let credit controls lapse last June 30.

Since then, board officials have watched with growing concern while dealers in autos, television sets, home appliances and other durable goods gradually relaxed credit rules, often against their own desires, and headed back to the "competition in terms" which plagued prewar retail selling.

Ads proclaiming "no money down" and "only a small monthly charge" have again become a familiar sight.

And concurrently, the board's estimate of installment credit outstanding rose to $9,613,000,000—an all-time high.

During August, alone, the board found, installment debt increased $282,000,000, with auto sales a major factor.

Complete figures for September are not available, but there is every indication of another substantial climb.

Board officials are watching the trend closely, although there is nothing they can do about it at present. They are not yet greatly alarmed, because the national income also is high.

Board experts believe the critical thing to watch is the ratio between installment credit and national income. And so far that is not "too far out of line" in their opinion.

But if the trend toward easy credit buying continues, and the national income holds steady or drops, it may not be long before the board hoists warnings.

As one high official put it:

"If there is one thing certain in economics, it is that loose credit terms eventually lead to serious trouble. When future purchasing power is mortgaged on too grand a scale, the chances that a business slump will turn into something worse are considerably increased.

"There is no question that some of the credit terms being offered to the public today are excessively easy. Responsible credit men themselves agree that such extremes are dangerous."

In a radio interview over station WPIK, Alexandria, he said another repeal fight next year would run into "the same sort of discussion and the same sort of people" that blocked this year's repeal try.

ployment of approximately two million workers in the metal-working and other industries, including the steel workers on strike. From November 1 on, unemployment will increase at an accelerated rate.

"Between November 1 and 15, according to available information on inventories of iron and steel in the hands of users, the mass production industries, such as the automotive, metal container, machinery, electric appliance and construction industries will find it necessary to reduce the number of their workers drastically.

By December 1, if the strike continues, unemployment directly attributable to the strike will be approximately five million. Furthermore, it is estimated that by January 1 there will, in effect, be a complete shutdown in the metal-consuming industries.

"I am particularly concerned for the more than 200,000 small manufacturers and the additional thousands of service establishments which depend upon frequent steel inventory replacement for their existence.

"Small fabricators and other businesses directly or indirectly dependent upon iron and steel supplies, have successfully weathered the storm of postwar readjustments, but in so doing have drawn heavily on their financial resources.

"For the most part, smaller firms depend upon fast distribution of free stocks of steel to meet their operating needs. Stoppage of the flow of stocks to these small concerns will interrupt operations more quickly and seriously than larger concerns.

"Current reports coming to the department suggest that many small firms will be forced to close their plants if steel inventory replacements do not become available before November 15, and far too many of these firms will not have the capital to reopen.

AFL Declines to Join Strike Fund Pool

ficial comment but said privately that "organic unity" of labor must come first before there can be any kind of cooperation with other segments of the badly-split trade union movement.

"Organic unity" in AFL language means the complete absorption of the UMW and CIO-affiliated unions into the AFL. It has been the chief stumbling block in all previous proposals for a unified labor front.

Lewis last week called on the AFL to join with him in setting up a $2,500,000-a-week war chest to back Murray's fight for pensions in the steel industry.

He said the steel industry, insurance companies and the Mellon and duPont financial empires were waging a "vast and barbaric attack" on the steel workers intended to destroy them and the rest of the labor unions "one by one."

Murray folowed up with an expansion of the idea, calling on the UMW and the AFL to join the CIO in setting up a common strike fund for "the common defense and general welfare of the labor movement." Cooperation, he said, was necessary to fight "the monopolists and financial interests who dominate the great industries of this country."

New War in Java Feared by Sultan

Batavia, Java, Oct. 16 (AP).—The Indonesian Republic's Minister of Defense, Sultan Hamengku Buwono, said today he feared open warfare soon would spread once again throughout Java and Sumatra. Dutch authorities said they were astonished at the statement.

The uneasy truce between the Dutch and the Republicans, inspired by the U. N., threatens to blow up in East Java, the minister said.

He made his statement on his return to the Republican capital at Jogjakarta after conferring with Dutch High Commissioner H. J. Lovink at Batavia for the past few days.

"The rapidly deteriorating situation in East Java," the Sultan said, "is full of explosive possibilities; and if the Dutch continue to be unreasonable it is feared an armed clash is not only inevitable but will soon spread to the whole of Java and Sumatra."

Buwono said the Dutch and Republicans were having trouble getting along in the area where the two armies are intermingled.

Earlier, the Dutch unofficially accused the Republicans of trying to surround the Netherlands army outposts to better the Republican military position.

The Republicans accused the Dutch of disarming Republican soldiers and arresting Republican citizens.

Holland Preparing To Grant Sovereignty

The Hague, Oct. 16 (AP).—The Netherlands government may grant sovereignty to Indonesia on December 15, an informed source said today.

ILSE KOCH
. . . Faces trial by Germans

Munich, Oct. 16 (AP).—Isle Koch, 42, the infamous mistress of Buchenwald, will be turned over to German authorities Monday at the end of her four-year term in an American military prison.

The Germans will try her again on charges arising from her days at the concentration camp.

United States Army authorities prepared to throw a protective cordon around the prison when the transfer is made in anticipation of bitter reaction among some 4000 displaced Jews in a nearby camp.

Many of the Jews are presumed to have had relatives in Buchenwald when Isle conducted her reign of sadism there as the wife of the commandant, now dead.

New Austerity Measures Seen For England

Doncaster, England, Oct. 16. (AP) Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison warned Englishmen today their government is about to make some decisions which "are bound to be unpleasant for us all."

The stern measures contemplated, Morrison told a Labor Party meeting here, are necessary to prevent a drift into "economic chaos and unemployment."

The government's program is expected to be considered by the cabinet's economic policy committee Monday.

It will be the first concern of Parliament, which will resume sessions Tuesday. A policy statement by Prime Minister Attlee was expected soon after.

The Prime Minister is expected to eliminate some government jobs.

Moch Threatens All-Socialist Cabinet if Haggling Goes On

Paris, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Socialist Premier Jules Moch served notice on France's haggling political leaders tonight that if they do not come to terms he will form an all-Socialist government at noon Monday.

Socialist spokesmen said the MRP Party had agreed to meet Monday at 9 a. m. (3 a. m., EST) and tell Moch whether or not they will go along with him by 11 a. m. (5 a. m., EST).

Moch, the tough former Interior Minister whom Communists hate, said as he finished conferences for the night:

"I can swear to you that there will be a government at noon tomorrow.

"I can give you only the name of the Prime Minister. He is Jules Moch."

New Grabs Predicted From Wealthy Britons

Rhymney, Wales, Oct. 16 (AP)—Health Minister Aneurin Bevan today told fellow Welshmen that Britain's millionaires "are worse off, and we intended that they should be."

"Further redistribution is to take place," the Labor Party minister told a political gathering, "because redistribution is also retribution."

In the past, he said, "people in Great Britain, babies and mothers, were dying in order to promote the peace and tranquillity of the millionaires."

Czechs Seek Missing Relatives

ents—moving up in the line—reached the information desk.

They asked for their daughter, and presented the food package.

The policeman scanned the pages of a huge register.

"She's not here," he said. "I suggest you try Pankrac Prison."

The girl's parents decided to take a taxicab. Even before they told the driver where they wanted to go, he knew. The food package was the giveaway.

"I've taken hundreds of persons out to Pankrac this week," he said. "Everybody's looking for someone else."

The parents of the girl squeezed through the crowd up to a policeman sitting before a list of names.

Again they asked for their daughter. Again they offered the food package.

Again the policeman scanned the pages.

This one said "We'll take the food package. Your daughter is here. Now get in line with the other people and wait."

Finally the girl's parents arrived at the reception desk.

They handed in their package. It was opened and thoroughly searched. Any written messages were destroyed. But the policeman promised to relay any verbal message.

"All right, that's all," he finally said.

"You can bring another food package in two weeks."

The parents left then.

Soviet Union Picks Pushkin To Guide East German State

Berlin, Oct. 16 (AP).—Russia entrusted the guidance of the East German republic today to a tight-lipped diplomat who pulled the strings for the Communist coup in Hungary after the war.

Naming Gregori M. Pushkin chief of its diplomatic mission, the Soviet Union became the first power in the world to grant legal recognition to the 9-day-old state.

German Communists said Prime Minister Otto Grotewohl's government in East Berlin would soon gain the formal diplomatic nod from five other nations—Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria.

Jubilant Over Prospect

They were jubilant over the prospect that the Eastern republic was headed toward top rank among Soviet satellites in Europe.

Pushkin was replaced as Soviet Ambassador in Hungary last June, his handiwork of a "peoples' democracy" complete.

In four postwar years, he had helped Matyas Rakosi and other Moscow-trained revolutionaries break Hungary's largest party, the Small Landholders, and to smother Catholic resistance in a dominantly Catholic country.

Until mid-1947, Pushkin successfully directed Hungarian Communist strategy under the baffled gaze of American and British representatives sitting with Russians on an Allied Control Commission.

Failed to Lift a Hand

The Western failed to lift a hand when the Communists forced the resignation of Small Landholder Premier Ferenc Nagy in May of that year.

A few months later, a peace treaty dissolved the Control Commission. The Westerners bowed out, but Pushkin stayed on.

Milestones in Pushkin's Budapest career included the trial and conviction of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, the resignation of Small Landholder President Zoltan Tildy and the hanging of his son-in-law, and the entrapment of allegedly pro-Tito Communists headed by former Foreign Minister Laszlo Rajk.

ter, and probably the toughest for the Reds to crack, is Chiang Kai-shek's island fortress of Formosa, 100 miles off the east coast. To get at it, the Communists would have to cross the open sea under air and naval attack and face an estimated 100,000 troops once they arrived.

The Nationalist Central News Agency reported that Reds attacking Amoy had driven ashore onto that island city at dawn after a 12-hour artillery bombardment.

The British steamer Anhui was caught in the crossfire as it left Amoy and was hit by three shells. It limped into Hongkong today with three Chinese passengers dead and 24 wounded. It had 1400 aboard.

Ship Nationalists Halted Now Reported Under Way

The Chinese Nationalists apparently have released the American freighter Flying Trader halted off Shanghai Saturday by a Nationalist warship.

H. J. Isbrandtsen, president of the Isbrandtsen Steamship Co., New York," owners, said he had received a message the ship is "under way" again. The vessel was en route to Tientsin.

Yugoslavia's Acceptance by U. N. Forecast

Lake Success, Oct. 16 (AP).—A western diplomatic source predicted today Yugoslavia will win a seat in the United Nations Security Council despite Russian opposition.

A Yugoslav victory would deprive the Russians of one of their two sure votes in the 11-nation council. There have been hints such an eventuality might bring results drastic for the United Nations.

The U. N. Assembly will choose on Thursday between American-backed Yugoslavia and Russian-sponsored Czechoslovakia for the seat now held by the Soviet Ukraine.

U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie has issued several denials of stories that Russia threatened to quit the U. N. unless the Czechs are elected.

Progress is reported in efforts to solve the long-standing East-West conflict in the Balkans. Replies to a Balkan peace plan submitted by the U. N. Balkan conciliation committee are due Monday morning.

Congress Record Scored, Defended

By The Associated Press

Party leaders in the Senate hotly debated the record of the waning first session of the Eighty-first Congress yesterday.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, Republican leader, said the proposals advanced by President Truman as a "Fair Deal" program have turned out to be empty promises.

Accusing the democratic majority of Congress of plunging the Government "once more" into a dangerous policy of borrowing to spend, Wherry's statement forecast a deficit of five billion dollars for the fiscal year ending next June 30.

But Senator Myers of Pennsylvania, assistant Democratic whip, said he is proud of what Congress has done in approving foreign and domestic policies.

In a speech recorded for broadcasting in Pennsylvania, Myers called on voters in next year's election to "weigh the good against the bad," and then "decide for yourselves where this Congress stands."

Senator Brewster (R., Me.) stepped into the argument with a talk prepared for radio (WWDC). He contended most of President Truman's program has not been enacted into law in a session lasting more than 300 days. He compared this with a post-election estimate he said Mr. Truman had made, that the program could be enacted in 15 days.

Wherry declared the record "demonstrates that the conflict within the Democratic Party makes it an unsafe agency for translation of the will of the people into law.

"For 9½ months the poorly organized and weakly-led Eighty-first Congress has dragged out the longest peacetime session in the history of the Republic," the Nebraskan continued. "Poor leadership resulted in the worst log-jam on appropriation bills—in the United States legislative history."

Asserting that the Eighty-first Congress had written laws bearing a closer resemblance to those enacted by the Republican-controlled Eightieth than to Mr. Truman's proposals, Wherry said:

"The extravagant promises of a political campaign in which the President offered everything to everybody and paternalistic Government to distribute the booty have turned out to be empty promises."

Among other things, he declared the Brannan farm plan "has been an unrecognized child to Administration spokesmen in the Congress."

Myers said he doesn't hear very often anymore the term "Eighty-worst" Congress applied to the present session.

He said Congress gave President Truman and the State Department practically everything they asked for in foreign affairs legislation—"not out of loyalty to the Administration or blind acceptance, but out of thorough-going, intensive, critical and extended study of the merits."

Farm Bill Salvage Fails

Aiken bill that it was a compromise, and would be corrected later. That is what Congress is supposed to be doing now.

The Anderson compromise farm bill is going through the same sort of pangs in becoming law—if it ever does. Last night it was hard to find one member of Congress who expected anything like the Anderson bill to be enacted. In fact, most expect to see nothing agreed upon in conference.

That will mean that the Aiken law will become effective next January. The most that anyone expected would be a compromise something like that of a year ago—a bill that will satisfy both the elements.

Here are some of the points of similarity between the present farm law deadlock and the stalemate of 16 months ago:

1. In each case efforts to reach a satisfactory law were delayed until the closing days of the session. In 1948 the Conference Committee was in a 10-day deadlock. Before a final compromise reached the floors of Congress, conferences broke up six times in angry, and what all thought, final disagreement. Several members of the Conference Committee—Southern Democrats in the House—refused to sign the compromise. They are the ones torpedoing any deviation from high, rigid, price supports now.

Same 16 Months Ago

2. The Senate has approved, after a series of flip-flops, a lowered range of price supports from those at present in effect. The House stands pat for high, rigid supports, adopted during the war as an incentive for increased production of farm commodities. The situation was exactly the same 16 months ago.

3. High rigid price supports are, in application, satisfactory only for certain crops. Curiously, the crops they are most beneficial to are those raised in the South.

The crops to which price supports have been applied by Congress are called "basic" crops. They constitute about one fifth of agricultural production. Actually they are not as "basic" as some other vegetables, for instance. They were chosen because they were "controllable" rather than basic. In other words, their production can be controlled, and after harvest they can be stored.

Curiously the most easily controllable crops, cotton, peanuts and tobacco, are grown south of the Mason-Dixon line. Another, wheat, is grown in the North, but even it is not as subject to exact controls as cotton, for instance. Corn, the country's chief crop, is almost impossible to contain within marketing quotas—a prime requisite for price supports.

The lineup for the various programs in Congress reflects this situation. High, rigid price supports are asked by the Southern cotton, tobacco and peanut States and the Northern wheat States. Sliding supports, without such regimentation, are urged by corn-growing States.

The farm legislation is right now keeping Congress in session. Apparently the answer is which element in Congress will win out—adherents of high price supports for farmers or those who want to adjourn and go home.

La Follette, Mead Reported Choice of Truman for Posts

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday was reported to have under consideration two former Senate colleagues as possible appointees to the Federal Power Commission and Federal Trade Commission.

A Democratic official who declined to be quoted by name, said he was told Mr. Truman may try to persuade former Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr., of Wisconsin to fill the Power Commission vacancy created by Senate rejection of Leland Olds for a third term.

There were reports on Capitol Hill that the President might offer former Senator James Mead of New York a post on the Trade Commission to succeed Garland Ferguson, 71-year old member, who may retire soon.

Mr. Truman was said to be casting about for an outstanding appointee to succeed Olds and to be determined that the man he picks bears the "liberal" label.

Friends expressed doubt that La Follette, former Progressive who turned Republican before his defeat for reelection in 1946, would be interested in any Federal post. Currently he is an economic consultant here.

If he named La Follette or any other Republican, Mr. Truman would give the GOP nominal control of the Power Commission, since it now has two Republican and two Democratic members.

Mead, who succeeded Mr. Truman as chairman of the Senate's War Investigating Committee, has been out of public office since he was defeated for Governor of New York by Thomas E. Dewey in 1946.

Ferguson, a Democratic member of the FTC, who has been serving since September, 1948, when his term expired, without a new appointment, has indicated he would like to retire.

Douglas, 51, 'Satisfactory' On Birthday

Yakima, Wash., Oct. 16 (U.P.)—Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, severely injured in a horseback-riding accident two weeks ago, was reported "progressing satisfactorily" as he celebrated his fifty-first birthday in St. Elizabeth's Hospital here today.

Dr. Schuler Ginn, the justice's attending physician, said:

"Justice Douglas will be in the hospital at least another week and will stay for a time in Yakima until he feels that he is able to travel."

Douglas suffered 13 broken ribs and a punctured right lung when he was thrown from a horse near Summit Pass in the Cascade Mountains.

Mead Considered For FTC Post, Secretary Says

The soul of a ship...

For centuries man has felt a kinship with the ship he sails in, more personal perhaps than with any other man-made thing. You will sense this yourself... from the first moment you set foot on a Cunarder's deck.

You may get a clue in the solicitude of its crew for its immaculate cleanliness and sparkle . . . for the mechanical perfection of its operation. Or you may find it in small things . . . a quiet word that reveals a deep pride in years or even generations of service . . . or the way your steward and even your fellow passengers call her "my ship".

Whatever it is that gives this ship a soul . . . the set of a cap . . . the courteous smile . . . the gallant name . . . you will know it is there, distinct from that of every other ship, and yet part of a great sea-going tradition.

Services Vary For Judges' Marriages

There are 11 marrying judges in Washington, but none of them wants to kiss the bride.

The jurists of Municipal Court and the Municipal Court of Appeals, where almost all the 500 yearly civil marriages are performed, are completing the first 18 months of their new system, guaranteeing that anyone who is eligible to marry and wants a civil ceremony can get it free.

"It's worked out fine," according to Chief Judge Nathan Cayton. "We haven't had a complaint to my knowledge."

The new system was started in April, 1948, in answer to the adverse publicity the jurists were getting. There were newspaper articles pointing out that about three judges had cornered the marriage market, that some were leaving cases unfinished to get a quick marriage "gratuity," that many persons who wanted a civil ceremony couldn't find a judge.

Forlorn Hunt

Almost every day, forlorn couples wandered the court corridors looking for a marrying jurist, and it was rumored that some judges were getting into higher tax brackets because of the marrying trade.

It was then that the judges called a meeting, and quickly put into effect a plan based on the idea that since civil marriages were authorized by law they should be readily available.

Now all the judges of the two courts, with the exception of Judges Walter J. Casey and Ellen K. Raedy, rotate in performing ceremonies. They agreed to refuse any fees and gratuities, and to be on hand whenever possible to accommodate the public.

Now, to get a civil ceremony, you just tell the marriage license clerk, and he within a few minutes calls a judge who will make an appointment for it.

The kinds of ceremonies are almost as numerous as the judges, but don't try to offer that little white envelope to the judge. He'll turn you down, and probably won't even accept a cigar.

In case a bridegroom insists on making a contribution, one judge sends the money to the Florence Crittenton Home for unwed mothers. Other judges forward gratuities to the Community Chest or the prisoners' library fund at Occoquan.

Judge Gives Book

Judge Frank H. Myers turns the giving around and the bride gets—in lieu of the judicial kiss—a copy of the handsome Protestant Episcopal marriage service book, which the judge signs in the appropriate places. The book costs him 60 cents but he's glad to pay it.

Myers gives the most elaborate ritual of all.

First, he asks how long the couple has been acquainted, and that's why a sailor and his girl who had been acquainted two weeks didn't get hitched recently.

Next, Judge Myers asks why the pair wants a civil ceremony, and finally whether they will object to the Episcopal service.

If the answer is satisfactory, he reads almost all of the service, omitting for "reasons of my own" the prayer for children. He also blesses the ring.

Judge Brice Clagett, also an Episcopalian, gives an abridged service, omitting mention of the Deity.

Cayton Service

Judge Cayton developed his own service, which is simple but impressive.

All the judges wear robes for weddings, and the linguists among them are equipped to use some French or German.

Walter F. Bramhall, Municipal Court clerk, says that those desiring a civil service usually are transients or persons who, for religious reasons, do not wish to be married in church.

Fewer than 10 percent of those married here get civil ceremonies.

Bramhall keeps a clerk who, for perhaps two hours a day, makes the appointments for the judges and other arrangements. But at present, the judges are discussing whether to seek congressional authority for a clerk to perform ceremonies.

However, they are far from unanimous on the advisability of this.

Dewey Chemical Head Gets Notre Dame Post

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 16 (AP).—Bradley Dewey, president of the Dewey & Almy Chemical Co. of Cambridge, Mass., yesterday was elected chairman of the advisory council for science and engineering at the University of Notre Dame.

Dewey succeeds Edgar Kobak, New York business consultant. Britton I. Budd, president of the Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois at Chicago, was elected vice chairman.

a well dressed man is not accidentally well dressed!

He decides on the suit he's going to wear; then selects a harmonizing color for his hose. Whether solid shades, clock or pattern, he knows that color-ensembling is the important factor.

He chooses a white or solid color shirt for a plaid or striped suit. He knows how to avoid pattern clashes, how to achieve harmony.

With a back-handed toss over his shoulder he fastens his suspenders . . . for he knows that trousers hang smartly when worn with suspenders. Colors should blend easily with shirt, tie, suit.

Now for his neckwear! With solid color or conventionally patterned suits, he chooses a vividly toned, boldly patterned tie. With a plaid or colorfully patterned suit he selects neatly figured or simply-designed panel ties.

Notice how this smartly dressed man dons his hat with fingers on front and back for shape-retention. He never puts on a hat with hands on sides. This method pulls hat out of shape.

Consider the shade of your hat. It should blend with the color theme you're wearing today.

WITHOUT LOOKING can you name the color and pattern of the tie you're wearing? Now glance down! See if it has the same color theme as your hose. If so, you are aware of one of the basic rules of correct attire. Yes, the colors of your neckwear and hose should harmonize.

The key to it all is color and pattern harmony. Most men are alike in their habits when they start to dress. But when they've finished—what a difference. Some emerge well-dressed, neat and distinguished in appearance. Others—well, even with a very costly wardrobe, fail to take advantage of the few basic rules of dress which would do so much for their appearance.

Color is an important factor! It brings out your personality . . . instills confidence and poise. It adds life and sparkle . . . complements your clothing. When you're shopping think first of your basic wardrobe at home . . . and then look for the colors and patterns that give you a well-rounded, versatile wardrobe.

It isn't what you spend for your clothes that counts. It's how wisely and how carefully you select them. A well-dressed man is not accidentally well-dressed.

Free-for-All Hurts Three in Maryland

Three plumbers were injured in a free-for-all early yesterday at Hilltop Restaurant, 5211 Marlboro Pike, Coral Hill, Md.

The plumbers were in a group that had stopped at the restaurant after a bowling tournament, and were leaving when two unidentified men entered.

One of the men brushed the other and an argument started, which spread to about eight persons and into the kitchen, police said. More than 50 spectators cheered the combatants.

Flying beer bottles and vegetables sailed through the kitchen until Prince Georges County police responded to a riot call sent out by the proprietor, B. A. Smith.

In the excitement, police said, the two unidentified men who started the fight disappeared.

The injured men were:

Paul E. Merriman, 31, of 5101 Woodland ave., Meadow View, Md., deep laceration over the eye and bruises on face.

Martin Thomas, 1723 41st pl. se., shock and loss of blood from severe cuts on the hands.

James Thomas, his brother, of the same address, who was scratched.

All three were taken to Providence Hospital by Mrs. Ernestine Thomas, wife of Martin, and treated and released.

With Frogs It's Trios, Three to One

Tallahassee, Fla., Oct. 16 (AP).—It took Coleman J. Goin three years to find out, but now it's final:

Florida spring peeper frogs don't sing soloes.

What they sing, the University of Florida researcher reported, is trios.

Even if you hear hundreds of them, it's still trios—a big bunch of them.

And how do the frogs organize the trios?

Well, says Goin, one lets out a peep or two. If no other joins in, he lets out a trill.

That, the researcher found, is just about irresistible. Another is sure to respond.

The two go over the same routine until they pick up a third. Then the concert begins.

What's the reason for all this? Goin said frankly he doesn't know.

Bay State Man Slain During Plant Robbery

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 16 (U.P.).—The wealthy founder of a chain of dry cleaning stores was found bludgeoned to death in a basement vault today and police said he was a victim of murder and robbery.

The body of Harry P. Shea, 74, of Boston was found by his two sons in the basement of the main plant of the firm which bears his name.

Shea's hands had been tied with a red necktie and empty money bags were strewn around his body. Several more money bags were inside the vault but they had not been opened. The vault was used to store money and valuable furs.

Baltimore Clergy Blame Selves in Youth's Stabbing

Baltimore, Oct. 16 (AP).—More than 100 Baltimore ministers and religious leaders publicly blamed themselves today for the fatal stabbing of a Negro youth in a racial battle royal.

The victim, 19-year-old Linwood Matthews, jr., was knifed just below the heart October 2 in a city park after dispute between a group of white and Negro youths led to blows.

The religious leaders said in a joint statement, signed by 116 clergymen:

"There must be countless other citizens who feel as we do, guilty before God simply because we have been citizens of a city where a boy could be stabbed to death because of the color of his skin."

Posse Combs Wooded Park for Clews to Missing Actress

Hollywood, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—A posse of horsemen today searched hilly and wooded Griffith Park for clews to the whereabouts of Actress Jean Spangler who has been missing since she walked out of her home October 7.

Lieut. George Banta directed the mounted posse of 35 reserve officers—many of them women—and about 200 volunteers on foot in a thorough search of the 4253-acre park.

Their search fanned out from Fern Dell, where the black cloth purse of the television and film actress, a willowy brunette, was found a week ago.

Although Banta indicated he believed Miss Spangler may still be alive, he said that the search of the park was being made on the hope of finding some clew.

"You aren't just looking for a body," he told the police reserves. "I want you to turn in anything that you find."

A uniform of an inmate of the Los Angeles County Jail was found buried in dirt and twigs. Some tools wrapped in an old rag also were found.

When Miss Spangler left her apartment October 7, she told her sister-in-law, Mrs. Sophie Spangler, that she was going to work.

Landlord Kills Tenant and Self

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 16 (U.P.)—A landlord, enraged over a baby's illness, today shot and wounded the child and its father, killed the mother and then committed suicide.

Detectives said the man apparently went berserk when the young couple living in his home mentioned their child's slight illness, because he himself had been suffering from some ailment.

Francis E. Cheney, 53, postal money order clerk here, fired two shots at 25-year-old Floyd E. Greer, striking him in the neck and shoulder, police said. One slug went through the arm of David Greer, the 11-month-old son he was holding in his arms.

Cheney then pursued Greer's fleeing wife to her bedroom closet and there shot her six times as she cowered from him. Police said she died instantly. A moment later, Cheney turned the gun on himself.

Detective J. R. Norrell said the trouble started when Greer asked his landlord to turn on the heat because his child appeared sick. Although Cheney agreed to this, Norrell said, there were objections from his wife, Mrs. Jonnie Cheney, 51.

"Mrs. Cheney started arguing," Norrell said, "although Cheney had already said, 'Why don't you turn on the living room gas furnace?' and had also offered to call a doctor.

"Then he just went mad over the idea of sickness," Norrell added. "I suppose it was because he had been sick himself. He didn't seem to be mad at Greer or the child.

Engel Talks With Wife All Night

Chicago, Oct. 16 (U.P.)—Sigmund Engel, 73, the admitted master love swindler who has been reunited with the one woman he married, said today they spent the whole night "talking."

"We didn't get to sleep until 6 a. m.," he said.

The wife, Pauline Langton of New York, who once accused Engel of making off with $50,000 of her money, arrived by plane here last night to join him.

After three months in jail, Engel finally was freed last week on bail in the numerous swindling charges filed against him by disillusioned women.

"She's the most wonderful wife in the world," the silver haired Romeo said.

He added distastefully that they were awakened at 8 a. m. by Charles Jones, who put up Engel's $37,500 bail and is keeping a close eye on him.

Engel said that Monday he will open an office for his ambitious plans for a radio, movies and television corporation.

"I'm a fast worker, but—ah—use that advisedly," he said.

"I'm still her Marc Anthony and she's my Cleopatra," he said. "And, of course, there's Antoine."

Antoine is the French poodle Mrs. Engel wore over her shoulder last night when she arrived from New York.

Mrs. Engel said that "we're divinely happy."

"Sam (his nickname) is feeling so much better out of jail and is getting back his health," she said. "Also his vim and vigor."

Arlington Man, 27, Is Fatally Shot After Argument

An Arlington laborer was fatally shot yesterday while standing in the front yard of a home at 1745 N. Culpeper st., Arlington, county police reported.

He was identified by Detective Chief C. B. Pressley as Melvin Lee Daniels, 24, 1813 N. Cameron st.

On arrival at Arlington Hospital shortly before 5 p. m., he was pronounced dead of a shotgun wound in the chest.

Pressley said Leonard Cochran, 37, of the Culpeper st. address, has been charged with murder. Police, called to the scene by a neighbor, said the two men had been arguing only a short time before the shooting.

Police Seize 153 In Bowery After Attack on Nuns

New York, Oct. 16 (U.P.)—Police squads swept up 153 derelicts in raids on the Bowery last night and early today after an attack on two nuns.

It was the largest mass arrest ever staged in the Bowery.

Those who had jobs—103 of them—were released with suspended sentences. The other 50, unemployed or hopelessly intoxicated, were given 30-day sentences on disorderly conduct charges.

In court today, a man who admitted he was drunk when he attacked two nuns yesterday was committed to Bellevue Hospital for observation.

Two other men arrested with him were released.

Princess Dies; Husband Gave Up Throne for Her

Copenhagen, Denmark, Oct. 16 (U.P.)—Princess Aage of Denmark, 64, widow of the Royal Danish Prince who was long an officer in the French Foreign Legion in Africa, died tonight at her Copenhagen residence, the Yellow Palace.

Prince Aage was a cousin of the late King Christian X and a nephew of the late Queen Alexandra of Britain. He fell in love with the Countess Mathilde Calvi di Bergolo, daughter of Count Calvi di Bergolo, who was Italian Minister to Denmark.

He gave up his right of succession to the throne to marry her in 1914, as she was not of royal stock. He assumed the title of Count of Rosenberg but continued to be known as Prince.

Curtis, the actor—we had many mutual friends—and Harry Cushing of the Chase National Bank and we had a gay time. It was just at the end of the trip that I noticed people treating me with extra kindness and I guess curiosity."

"And then when we landed in Barcelona, the trouble really began," she continued. "Reporters were waiting at the dock, and no matter how often I denied that I was Virginia Hill, they were not convinced."

Threatened, She Says

"At the Ritz Hotel where we were staying in Barcelona," Mrs. Verges said, "it was awful. I kept getting anonymous telephone calls all day. I was threatened. People would stop me in the lobby and ask 'Is Lucky handsome? Is Lucky your boy friend? Is Lucky coming here to the Ritz?'"

Miss Hill, whose whereabouts have been secret since Siegel was slain in her Beverly Hills home in July, 1947, is an acquaintance of "Lucky" Luciano, former New York vice overlord, now in Italy.

"Waiters in the hotel were rude and began making improper advance," Mrs. Verges reported. "My children were asked terrible questions. Spanish authorities had refused to release the brand new Cadillac I brought over with me, and I just felt it would be simpler to come home."

Mrs. Verges said that hardly anyone believed that she was not Virginia Hill despite her protests. "When I told people I was the wife of Dr. Stephen Verges and was going to visit his people in Spain and then my own people in Italy, they just said 'Ah, she's going to Italy to visit this Lucky'."

Starlet 15 Years Ago

She said she had never seen or known Miss Hill, Siegel or Luciano. As a Warner Brother starlet 15 years ago, she did not go to Hollywood but made two pictures for them in Annapolis and one in Massachusetts under her maiden name, Evelyn Nazzanotte.

"The trip home, again on the Atlantic, was even worse," she said. "The crew had apparently been questioned by reporters in Genoa while I had been in Barcelona, and reporters told them of course I was Virginia Hill. Nothing I could say would make any difference. Male passengers on the return trip were especially rude."

"And then when two skeptical Treasury agents met me in New York and asked me impertinent questions, I was just about finished."

Dr. Verges, who was to have joined his wife in Spain later in the winter, met her in New York Saturday and they motored to Connecticut where their 11-year-old son was put in a school. Their 12-year-old daughter returned with them to their Washington home at 4800 16th st., nw.

"And the reporters were waiting for us there," she said. "And the telephone rang all yesterday morning. I just had to escape."

"No one has heard about this Virginia Hill for the last couple of years," Mrs. Verges said with a smile. "I bet she is getting a rest. I only wish I could."

Causes Of Crime

Representative Davis has wisely asked the House to enlarge the budget for the prospective investigation of crime and law enforcement in Washington. The $10,000 he now asks is a pitifully small sum with which to conduct a thorough investigation that will get at the causes behind the disgracefully high crime rate here. But it is four times the amount initially mentioned, and the augmented figure deserves full House support.

This newspaper repeatedly has called for an investigation of law enforcement in the Capital ever since its reporters more than two years ago unearthed irregularities in crime statistics. There are, however, several bad pitfalls in such a probe which Representative Davis ought to avoid at all cost. For example, there is a group in the city that would like to lay the entire blame on inadequate prosecution and too great a regard for civil liberties. If the investigation is to be more than a whitewash, it must encompass police and police methods as well as prosecution and the courts—and the relationship of each arm of law enforcement to the others.

Similarly there is some danger that a limited investigation will stop with the not too startling discovery that the crime rate among Negroes is exceptionally high. That is an obvious fact; what is important is to get at the reasons, and here the probers must review such things as the inattention to Negro crimes against Negroes and the Negro distrust of the police which has built up over a long period. Actually, any really comprehensive survey of crime causes would have to dig deeply into the mores of this community, including its social, economic and educational structure. It would be too much to expect the Davis investigation, with its small budget, to do all this. But it can make a helpful start in the right direction by avoiding the easy answers which interested parties may seek to foist on it.

Mr. Lewis' Gesture

John L. Lewis' proposal to join with AFL unions to give financial aid to the striking steelworkers appears to have been no more than a dramatic gesture. He not only made his appeal without asking whether the steelworkers would welcome such assistance, but he also sent his request to President Green of the AFL who is opposed to the CIO policy of concentrating on demands for pensions and social insurance in place of direct wage increases. Mr. Green has also sharply criticized Mr. Murray for assenting to the establishment of a board of inquiry in the steel dispute. The head of the AFL could not be expected to welcome appeals to aid a union whose president referred to him only a few days ago as "an old faddy-doodle who has never rendered a public service in his life." In fact, officials of the AFL have already rejected the request to set up a joint strike fund.

Mr. Lewis' chief purpose in urging a financial alliance between the UMW and AFL unions on behalf of the steelworkers may have been to emphasize the advantages from labor's viewpoint of a unified labor movement. At any rate, Mr. Murray has promptly seized the opportunity afforded by this unsolicited offer to stress the need for "unity of action on the part of all responsible and genuine American trade unions." He also indorses plans for a pooling of resources by the UMW, the steelworkers, and other CIO and AFL unions "for the common defense and general welfare of the labor movement." And, not to be outdone in generosity, Mr. Murray says that the steelworkers to a man stand ready to assist the UMW and all other unions forced to strike because of the opposition of the monopolists and financial interests.

Obviously this is a polite way of waving aside Mr. Lewis' offer and at the same time reminding him that the steelworkers are in no worse plight than the miners. Nevertheless, the exchange of amenities between two labor leaders who were recently hurling insults at each other is significant evidence of their mutual recognition of the need for unity in labor's ranks. Certainly the steelworkers and the coal miners cannot afford the luxury of factional strife under present conditions. For the defeat of either one of these striking unions would gravely impair the chances of victory for the other.

Mr. Lewis' offer has served a purpose, therefore, even though nothing has come of it. He can now put the blame for a possible failure to wrest concessions from the coal mine operators on the shortsightedness of AFL leadership. Similarly, if the steelworkers lose the battle for noncontributory pensions, Mr. Murray will be in a strong position to push his demands for unity of the labor movement.

Bonn And Berlin

Joseph Stalin wasted no time in greeting the establishment of the East German Republic and inviting its cooperation in insuring the peace of Europe. The pretense that the new regime is independent will deceive nobody, least of all the Germans; and they will understand "peace of Europe" to mean Russo-German control of Europe. The government, which is located in Berlin, owes its existence not to the people, who are sullen from an orgy of Russian despoilment, but to Moscow operating through its captive Socialist Unity Party. The Russians are afraid to allow elections to be held, though these are promised next year.

In the meantime, the East German Republic is formally operating under high-sounding authority. Last May there was an "election" of a People's Congress. The Germans in the zone had no choice; they were presented with a single list compiled by the Socialist Unity Party, and, even so, a third of the voters had the courage to vote no. Out of the People's Congress a People's Council was hand-picked, and this turned itself into the lower chamber of the East German Parliament. Out of this Council came an equally "hand-picked" government headed by the Communist leaders, President Pieck and Premier Grotewohl. The main point in an all-Russian five-point program, announced by the latter, pledges further drains on the people in the form of reparations to both the Soviet Union and the satellite states!

This is the regime which Stalin, blessing in a paternal message which he disguises as fraternal, hopes will become all-German. It was the inevitable result of the agreement among the Allies on the authority of which the Western Germans set up the West German Federal Republic at Bonn. Two halves are bound to try to become a whole, and unification from now on will probably be the stuff of German politics, East and West. However, when the average German in Western Germany thinks of unification, he includes the lost lands beyond Eastern Germany now in Polish possession. So does the Eastern German. Nevertheless, though this is one of the uppermost political considerations in Eastern Germany, not a word of encouragement for this irredentism appears in the program announced by Premier Grotewohl. This is the weakness, aside from the resentment for Russia, in the Russian drive for unification of Germany under Russian auspices.

Moscow, unable to play this card of irredentism, thus is to a great extent disarmed in the struggle for Germany. It could only obtain this card by stamping out Poland and dividing it with a risen Germany, and there is no possibility of this so long as Tito flourishes so temerariously in Eastern Europe, and encourages a fear-struck Russia to strike blindly against any dissidence.

What have the Allies to offer in this struggle over Germany? A representative regime at Bonn, protection while the Federal Republic is feeling its way to power and independence, and a coequal place in the European community. This latter is the card that should be played—not idle attacks on Russia's behavior in setting up the Eastern regime. The card has lain idle so long that the Allies have been making nationalists out of Germans who were potentially European. The last opportunity was at Strasbourg, and though Mr. Churchill wanted Germany invited to take a seat in the Council of Europe, the British and French authorities were noncompliant. Certainly there should be no competition with the Russians over concessions to Germany. They would be dangerous for bogus concessions, and the profits would only accrue to the spirit of a resurgent nationalism, and would have only one result, viz, a Russo-German union.

Navy: Summing Up

By supporting fully all the conclusions in Navy testimony before the House, Admiral Denfeld assumes responsibility for statements a good deal more rash than those he himself makes. Though he properly disavows the infamous charges of maladministration on which the investigation began, by implication he indorses what has seemed to many persons a near-rebellion. Inevitably this blanket support colors the effect of what otherwise is a sober summary of the Navy's case. The timing of the statement is also poor. It could have achieved a maximum impact only if the Chief of Naval Operations had issued it before lending support to the discreditable tactics of recent weeks and had accompanied it by his resignation instead of accepting an extension of his term of duty a few weeks ago.

However, Admiral Denfeld makes a good case for considering the Navy's function as far more than merely that of providing convoy and antisubmarine service. He correctly points out that sea power is not an end in itself, but a means of exerting national power against an enemy. In this context he makes a strong appeal for recognition that air power does not belong to the Air Force alone, and for consideration of carrier aviation in the whole context of air power.

It is on the development of weapons that Admiral Denfeld's statement seems to us the weakest. He proposes that each service design and develop its own weapons within budgetary limitations. By this criterion he has a point in the contrast between the treatment of the B-36 and the supercarrier. The Navy's objections to the B-36 came principally after procurement had started without evaluation of the bomber's merits; but the supercarrier was canceled before even a prototype was built. This gives some justification to the Navy's challenge of the B-36 and its role in strategic bombing.

But complete service autonomy in weapons development seems to us untenable. It would be stupid for the services to waste money on weapons at odds with strategic plans drawn by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Indeed, complete autonomy in weapons development would negate the definition of roles and missions to which Admiral Denfeld subscribes. There must be guidance, even if it is only general guidance. Furthermore, the admiral makes a mistake, in our opinion, in assuming that the Joint Chiefs always act on partisan consideration and that if the vote goes against the Navy they are ganging up.

"Unfinished Business"

The stiff sentences for criminal contempt of court imposed by Judge Medina upon the six members of defense counsel in the Communist conspiracy case were fully warranted by their conduct throughout the protracted trial. The punishment of these men was necessary as a warning example to other attorneys. For when it becomes possible for lawyers, acting in concert with defendants and spectators and organized demonstrators outside the courtroom, to turn the proceedings of a court of law into a spectacle suggesting now a low farce comedy and now the disturbed ward of a lunatic asylum, it is a sign that law itself has become impotent. This is precisely what happened in the German courts in cases involving Nazi storm troopers in the latter days of the Weimar Republic.

Many persons concerned for the preservation of American principles of justice have noticed with anxiety the increasing resort to such tactics by lawyers appearing in criminal cases having political and ideological connotations. Judge Reeves, who presided at the trial of Miss Judith Coplon here last summer, observed at its conclusion that her attorney, Mr. Archibald Palmer, had grossly abused "the courtesy and comity of this court." Five years earlier at the abortive trial of the mass sedition cases, Mr. James J. Laughlin was expelled from the courtroom after he had filed a petition for the impeachment of the trial judge. The judge, in fact, died before the trial could be concluded; and there seems little doubt that the antics of the defendants and their counsel had contributed grievously to the intense nervous strain of which he had complained.

The devices adopted by Mr. Palmer and those employed by Mr. Laughlin were crude and amateurish beside those employed by the counsel in the Communist trial. There is no doubt that they had hoped by a prolonged and carefully calculated campaign of insult and provocation to break down the amazing nerve and self-control that Judge Medina had preserved through his long ordeal, thereby hoping to achieve a mistrial, either by making it impossible for him to continue, or by goading him into some show of anger upon which a charge of prejudice might be based. In an interview with reporters after the trial, Judge Medina confessed that there was one occasion on which the defense attorneys had almost succeeded in breaking him down.

> One day when I was pretty close to gone, I had to go out and lie down. Whether I'd ever get back in that courtroom, I did not know. It was in the middle of summer when the heat was excessive, and there was almost constant bickering. I noted at the time that during the extreme heat all the defense lawyers were not in court together. It seemed to me that some were out resting so that they worked on me in relays.

What makes such behavior the more outrageous is that the attorneys had the status of officers of the court. Thus they were as much responsible as the judge himself for the preservation of its dignity and decorum. In view of all this one can merely marvel at Judge Medina's powers of forbearance. Nor did the strain upon his nerves and health in any wise impair the sharpness and vigor of his intellect, as was shown in his charge to the jury last Thursday. It was a masterpiece of judicial analysis, reprinted in full in Friday's edition of the New York Times, which devoted to it almost 16 full columns of its space. We commend it to all our readers.

K. K. Kawakami

The final years of the veteran Japanese journalist, K. K. Kawakami, who died here last week, were marked by frustration and tragedy. He came to this country at the beginning of the century as a young man, married an American, and devoted himself with great energy and enthusiasm to the work of interpreting the United States to the Japanese and Japan to Americans. He was for many years one of the best known figures among the corps of correspondents here. He acquired a great fluency in English and became the author of many books and innumerable articles for American magazines and newspapers.

The world he had made for himself suddenly collapsed on December 7, 1941. His popularity among his colleagues was gone and he had become an object of suspicion and hostility. He had retained his Japanese nationality, and although already old and ailing and incapable of harm, he was nevertheless arrested and interned as an alien enemy. After a few weeks some American friends succeeded in obtaining his release. The rest of his life was spent in relative obscurity, though when his health permitted he continued to write. He will be remembered by many Washingtonians with affection and regret.

Czech Uranium

In his letter of October 10, Mr. Jan Vinar, First Secretary of the Czechoslovak Embassy, is at pains to negate certain established facts about the Jachymov uranium mines. To make disappear, by implication, the grewsome image of Jachymov slave mines, by now so very familiar to all of us, he conjures up the enticing picture of Jachymov health resort and compares it to Miami and Warm Springs.

He skips over a very important detail. Jachymov uranium mines, heavily guarded and quite inaccessible, are a number of miles outside the city of Jachymov. There, I have no doubt, visitors are still allowed and, perhaps, encouraged.

Both the resort and the mines have come to be called by the common name of Jachymov. Both are in a way concerned with human lives. But they differ. While the resort with its famous radium treatment has given and still gives health and new life back to many a patient, the uranium mines kill. They kill their inmates on such a scale that in one week they smother in their deadly embrace perhaps more human lives than the Jachymov resort may ever hope to save.

From the forced labor camp in Kladno alone and within no more than three days the following large-scale deportations to Jachymov took place:

April 20, 1949—5 wagon-loads of prisoners, totaling 290 persons (train No. 513, left at 10:35 a. m.).

"The inmates of this forced labor camp did not have to appeal to a tourist agency. The agents of the Soviet MVD and their Communist helpmates in the Prague government provided for their transportation.

Many more are coming, perhaps daily. Only in the recent days neutral observers report that great many of the victims of the ghastly round-up going on in Prague have been shipped to Jachymov. Most of them will perish, brought to death by cancer of the lungs. It is indeed blasphemous to treat this heartrending subject in Mr. Vinar's facetious vein. This all the more so, because Mr. Jan Vinar is well placed to know all this and more.

A&P Cooperative

Several days ago an article appeared in The Post in which John Hartford, president of the A. & P., was quoted as saying, "If the Government wins, I am not going to give up my stake in the business. I will convert the whole works into the biggest consumer cooperative you ever saw."

But the hope which his suggestion might have engendered in the minds of the two million cooperative members in the United States, who know the benefits of consumer cooperation, died aborning, since Mr. Hartford so clearly did not know what he was talking about. If Mr. Hartford won't give up his stake in the A. & P., he can't make a consumer cooperative out of it—for the consumer has the stake, the ownership and the control in a co-op. Thousands of consumers, not one or two individuals, own the Rochdale Cooperative in Washington and the cooperative stores in Greenbelt—to cite two examples.

Mr. Hartford made another error in his statement, when he suggested that as a consumer co-op his chain would be run on a tax-free basis. Consumer co-op pay all the taxes any other business pays. If Mr. Hartford wants to lower A. & P. prices by contracting to pay patronage returns to customers the way cooperatives do, he won't have to pay taxes on the price reductions—any more than R. H. Macy does on the 1 percent patronage returns it pays to certain charge account customers.

But it is pleasant to day dream about the A. & P. chain run cooperatively by and for all the people, and we should be thankful to Mr. Hartford for the thought.

Fair Farm Return

"American," in his October 5 reply to my letter published September 21, devotes his space to an argument with the Illinois State College of Agriculture, which announced some years ago, before inflation, that each bushel of corn took from the soil what would cost 40 cents to replace. He would probably also reject statements by farmers in the best parts of Iowa that their soil is so depleted that, if hybrid corn had not been developed, they would not obtain yield enough to pay them to work their land. Of course, the reason for that is that the much larger root system of hybrid takes that much more from the soil.

"American" probably is one who believes that farmers want subsidies, when the biggest of all industries is entitled to a fair price in the market place. Perhaps he also assumes that the farmer is dunce enough to believe Congress would appropriate enough in subsidies to provide a fair return to him when his prices, over which he has no control, get down to a ruinous level.

If "American" does not know that the farmers will be content only with a self-financing price program, he is as mistaken as those holders of public office who are found, as last autumn, to be astounded by the political consequences of their assumption that the farmer is different from every other kind of businessman.

Mechanical Charity

Letting the Community Chest Federation or the Federal or State government handle our charities is probably the easiest way, but it tends to shift the responsibility onto public servants, professional social workers. It becomes, for the individual, a meaningless, mechanical gesture.

This is not to detract in any way from the achievements and the goals of Chest agencies. As a former newspaper reporter I have accompanied visiting nurses, Salvation Army personnel and other social workers in their never-ceasing work to relieve human misery and suffering. God knows — none of them ever had enough funds to do the 100 percent job he wished.

But the first great need in charity is compassion—brotherly love. Only as men become kinder, one to another, can we hope to develop a civilization which will continue to progress. We must give, not as wage earners or taxpayers, but as individuals inspired by the desire to serve mankind. These traits are developed in the family life, in church participation and in neighborhood. They are not developed by contributing one day's—nor even one year's—salary to a mechanical charity-dispensing agency.

Growing Constitution

The answer to Mr. George W. Williams' letter of October 5 about "Constitution Distorted" is that the Constitution is not a static, dead thing like the Latin language, but a growing, live thing like the American language. It grows with the development, mores and needs of the times. The method of growth is not limited to formal change by means of amendment, but includes interpretation by the courts, which slowly changes as times change.

By and large the growth from decade to decade of our written Constitution has conformed fairly well with the democratic ideal visualized by the Founding Fathers, but its growing pains are not always conducive to the mental comfort of the Draconian-minded. At that, it is much more orderly and deliberate than the growth of the American language, for a dictionary of even 10 years ago is now quite inadequate. Failure of the Constitution to grow would result either in injustice or revolution.

Patent Advertising

The insidious manner in which some adept bureaucrats are creeping into the field of advertising is enough to bring to a quick boil the blood of any advertising man.

I refer to the constantly increasing, Government-inspired advertising in the patent attorney profession.

Be it to the everlasting credit of Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer that he has fought in behalf of freedom of the press. If the Patent Office forces had their way, they would eliminate everything in advertising except a simple business card.

A new regulation rules out all "coupon" advertising by patent attorneys, for publication after January 1, 1950. As anyone knows, "Mail the coupon" is as American as the World Series and the 10-cent store. These bureaucrats ruled about a year or so ago that all patent attorney advertising must be written in the "third person."

So, there you have it. First, they clip the wings of free advertising, which is freedom of the press as much as free editorialism is, then they really throw the hooks into the patent attorney business by eliminating the "coupon."

Five-Inch Cruisers

Mr. Drew Pearson might have had a far more convincing article in your October 13 issue if he had had the facts concerning the characteristics of the vessels that took part in the so-called River Plate Battle. The German did not carry 8- but 11-inch guns. Mr. Pearson so often fails to have the facts. Perhaps that is why he does not know that we lost a greater percentage of 5-inch cruisers during World War II than of any other type.

It would seem a waste of effort to attempt to convince Mr. Pearson that a majority of the Navy was in favor of lightly-gunned cruisers but believed in some heavy types as well. The tactics that made possible the defeat of the Graf Spee by two 6-inch and one 8-inch cruisers would also, apparently, be over his head. Mr. Pearson would do well to consult a Navy man before making his absurd statements.

Matter of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Economic Schism

FOR THE SECOND TIME in a little more than a year, Dr. Edwin Nourse, chairman of the Economic Advisory Council, has sent his resignation to the White House. On the previous occasion, Dr. Nourse yielded to President Truman's pleas to stay on. This time, however, it is understood that Nourse is more determined to go, and that Truman is less reluctant to part with him. Hence a new EAC chairman is now being sought.

Ordinarily, it would be no great disclosure that another economist was leaving the Government. But Dr. Nourse is, in the first place, the official top dog among all Government economists. And his departure says much, in the second place, about the critically important trend of economic thinking and planning within the Truman Administration.

The Noursean economics have had their peculiarities. Hints of Government controls have almost always caused Dr. Nourse to declare that business was leveling off, or even to predict deflation. Suggestions of Government spending equally regularly have led Dr. Nourse to forecast immediate inflation of terrible proportions. In short, he has pictured the American economy as somewhat resembling sweet Alice Ben Bolt, who trembled with joy when you gave her a smile, and burst into tears at a frown.

NONETHELESS, Dr. Nourse has been one of the very few Government economists (as distinguished from members of the Truman Cabinet and White House entourage) with marked sympathy for the business viewpoint toward Government. He has generally fought a losing fight for this viewpoint. And there is a good deal of reason to believe that he decided to shake the dust of Government off his feet, when he was again defeated in this summer's debate over next year's budgetary policy.

In brief, it is known that Dr. Nourse both advocated even deeper cuts in foreign and defense spending than those already being made, and also suggested reductions of expenditure in the social welfare field. Since his proposals amounted to advice to the President that he abandon his entire program, they were hardly likely to be received with enthusiasm.

Indeed, the President himself almost seemed to be answering Dr. Nourse's arguments for economizing on social welfare in the following passage of his Labor Day speech at Pittsburgh:

"The selfish interests say we can't afford these programs during a boom because that would be inflationary. They say we can't afford them during a recession because that would be deflationary. They say we can't afford them during a war because we are too busy with defense, and we can't afford them in time of peace because that would discourage business."

For "selfish interests," read "businessmen." Recall that Dr. Nourse's strongest arguments for a budgetary balance were the danger of inflation and the need to promote business confidence. The President's remarks become pointed indeed. And it even begins to seem imaginable that this presidential declaration was what led Dr. Nourse to resign.

WHATEVER MAY HAVE been the circumstances of Nourse's decision, his retirement, if it materializes, will probably mean two things. First, it will mean a decided change in the character of the Economic Advisory Council. Within the council, Dr. Nourse has been a minority, always opposed by his fellow council members. Leon Keyserling and John Clark. But he has been a powerful minority. It is difficult to believe that the President will replace him with another man who is so completely out of step with Fair Deal social-political thinking.

Second, the loss of Dr. Nourse will mean a considerable reduction in strength of the administrative group which has been fighting, all this time, for budget-balancing. Outlays in next year's projected budget are reported to be only about a billion dollars below this year's spending. If tax revenue merely remains the same, there will again be a deficit of several billions. If this is the best that can be done in times of fairly good business, it is pretty clear that deficit-financing has now become a permanent habit of the Truman Administration. Dr. Nourse's departure may indeed be regarded as symbolizing this central fact.

What makes the position all the more difficult is the further fact that next year's budget deficit has only been held down by the appalling expedient of cutting the heart, liver and lights out of the defense program. Dr. Nourse would have had both of the defense program's legs amputated and one arm removed at the elbow. But even the cutting that is being done in the defense field, with every indication of presidential approval, will put this country in the incredible position of growing weaker and yet weaker, in the year after the explosion of the Beria bomb. Surely this situation cannot endure.

Congressmen In Spain

Pardon my chuckle upon reading that Congressmen Richards and Keogh were robbed of $5000 in Spain. But, on second thought, it is not as funny as it seems. For, actually, the taxpayers, including myself, were the real victims, robbed by the very five Congressmen who are merrily jaunting in sunny Spain instead of attending to business here.

A Communication

For a Multipurpose National Air Power

By Stuart B. Barber

NAVY leaders have drawn attention to dangerous trends in our air power development. Probably for the first time Congress is being enlightened in detail on such subjects as bombing accuracy and radar. For once, military leaders are attempting to provide Congress with an understanding of war and weapons, rather than merely a summary of military conclusions arrived at behind a veil of secrecy.

But Navy airmen, while they expose the disease within the services, have not as yet proposed a cure within the framework of the basic unification concept. The Nation demanded and the Congress enacted a unification of the services. Clearly the results intended have not been achieved. How then can we assure that the accomplishments of unification can be retained and extended and yet provide for ending the perennial disruptive struggle between the Navy and the Air Force?

Congressman Vinson has made a most constructive series of proposals in this direction. But I submit that they do not go to the heart of the question. They will not settle the dissension between the Air Force and the Navy. They will merely control its symptoms and outbreaks, and help to assure that decisions adverse to the Navy will be more fully and publicly reviewed.

I believe that the heart of the trouble lies in the conviction, permeating all levels of the Air Force and Army, that convoy escort and antisubmarine warfare are the sole proper functions of the Navy, and that the National Security Act of 1947 so intended.

Such a result is one which naval aviators, to a man, and with the justification of their experience, believe is of utmost danger to the Nation.

UNDERSTANDING of air power has been greatly hampered by semantic confusion, in which the struggle over service roles and missions has played a major part. It has also been thwarted by the vast propaganda effort to force the development of American air power backward into the narrow pattern set by Douhet and Mitchell a generation ago, before the great breadth of air power's possibilities had been explored and proven.

Mitchell asserted, before a modern carrier had yet been built, that the carrier could never provide effective air power. Air Force leaders still cling to Mitchell's theory, in the face of 25 years of development and four years of war experience. Douhet theorized long years ago that the city-bomber was the invincible epitome of air power. We have been told that the B-36 city-bomber is invulnerable.

The Air Force has attempted to persuade us that high-altitude area bombing, itself but one of many means of so-called "strategic" air warfare, is synonymous with air power. Concurrently the Air Force has attempted within the military establishment to broaden the content of its "strategic" mission to cover virtually all of air warfare except that in direct support of troops (which the Air Force slights), and that which is strictly auxiliary to naval surface warfare.

By such means the Air Force has determined to reduce the bulk of American aviation (and of American thinking about aviation) to the simple Douhet formula of city-bombing. From the attempt to enforce these concepts, and to suppress Navy expression of other concepts and the evidence which supports them, there has developed a general misconception of air power. What then are the salient facts of air powers on which our decision must be based?

FIRST, the common denominator of all air power is ability to control the air—ability to defeat the enemy's air forces and to utilize the air, the land and the sea without their interference. This, as the Strategic Bombing Survey emphasized, was essential to the success of every military operation, land, sea and air.

Control of the air is not achieved by mere defensive fighter operations. It is not achieved merely by mass bombardment. It is achieved by aerial defense; by forcing the enemy to send his planes into the air and shooting them down; by striking at his air bases; by disrupting their means of supply; by preventing his acquisition and construction of bases; by destroying his fuel sources; by preventing his pilot training; by destroying his aircraft factories; and by all these in combination.

To say that none of these, except merely defense of convoys, can ever be profitably undertaken by carrier-based aviation, is not only absurd but is a flagrant disservice to the security of the Nation.

THE ABILITY of naval aviation to carry out offensive action against enemy air forces is proven. Some 3000 Japanese planes were shot down by our carrier fighters over enemy territory. Carrier fighters and bombers destroyed over 5600 Japanese planes on the ground at their own airfields, against less than 3000 destroyed by Air Force planes in the Pacific. It is impossible to list the vast additional destruction inflicted on Japanese air bases in precision attacks by carrier planes. Carrier bombers attacked Tokyo aircraft factories successfully in bad weather. Through destruction of transport they deprived the enemy air forces of fuel.

The protection of convoys itself requires protection from air as well as from submarine attack. Shall we cripple our Navy's ability to attack the sources of such enemy air attack? Shall we deny the Navy offensive forces which can neutralize the inland air bases from which an enemy will resist a seaborne landing?

The Navy requires a strong offensive air power simply to carry out its general mission of controlling the sea and the air over and adjacent to the sea. But the United States requires more than the Navy alone requires: the Nation must have the additional power to strike enemy air and land power wherever found, from land or from the sea.

SECOND, the bulk of a nation's aircraft are, and should be, multipurpose. Emphasis on the single-purpose superbomber, and on the single-purpose interceptor, has obscured this.

A medium jet bomber neither knows nor cares whether it is laying mines in a harbor, bombing a vital front-line bridge, or destroying an oil refinery. It can do all of these jobs well. It can do them whether it is launched from an airfield or from a carrier. Why should we say that when operated from a carrier it may only lay mines?

A carrier dive bomber cares little whether its bombs are headed for a submarine or a railroad viaduct, or whether it is rocketing an armored column. It can do all three, and many more jobs besides equally well. Why should we say that it may only support Marine landing forces, or attack enemy ships? A carrier fighter is equally at home over a convoy, an enemy airfield, or the enemy's front-line troops. Must we limit it to staying over the convoy?

The iniquity of our present theory of roles and missions is that it disregards the abilities of the weapons it purports to guide. It forces them into employments which suit only the private prejudices of the individual services. Why should not a carrier force, protecting a line of sea communications against air attack, strike also at enemy transport or ground forces within its reach, which no other precision bombers can reach effectively?

Why should not our B-29s lay mass minefields whose size puts them beyond the ready capability of carrier forces? Yet under our present concepts such forces cannot be maintained for either of these "collateral missions," and for more besides—which these forces could do but for interservice jealousy and fear?

Why, in short, do we not frankly say that our multipurpose airplanes in both services constitute in fact a national, multipurpose air power—that they can be developed, built up, and used for any purpose that contributes to the national need, cutting entirely across service missions?

THIRD, carrier aircraft, whether sea-based or land-based, are in every important respect equal, and in some respects superior in performance to similar types of Air Force planes. The salient statistical comparison of the Pacific war has never been explained away: Carrier aircraft shot down 18 Japanese planes in air combat for each of their own losses to Japanese aircraft, while the corresponding ratio for Air Force planes was less than 5 to 1.

Fighters of carrier types more than held their own with Air Force fighters in the bloody air battles of the Solomons, when both flew from the same fields. Land-based Marine dive bombers supported Army troops throughout the Philippines campaign, winning the highest praise. Today's Navy Banshee provides interceptor performance which no Air Force fighter can match. Better Navy fighters will appear before better Air Force fighters. The Air Force has no plane which can match, in combined precision and power, the Navy's Skyraider, a carrier dive bomber that can operate, against any target, from sea or land.

What this means is that the United States, considering its military needs as a whole apart from artificial service missions, can safely maintain a force of naval planes of these types in excess of what might prove to be the minimum needed for strictly naval tasks. Safely, because any excess to naval needs can be turned with equal effectiveness to the support of "Army and Air Force missions," either from carrier bases or from bases on land. The reverse is not true, because if we should prove to be short of carrier planes, Air Force planes and pilots cannot be diverted successfully in the reverse direction.

We cannot anticipate every detail of our war needs, for we cannot know our enemy's military plans. We must maintain a margin, a reserve, a flexibility for emergencies. That margin should be in planes of maximum versatility, maximum multipurpose usefulness, capable of operation from either ship or shore as need may develop. These are precisely the qualities of carrier air forces. To have them as an all-purpose reserve is not only safety; it is also, since one plane can fill many possible holes, the truest economy.

TO THIS end, then, I believe the Congress should address itself: to educe the facts, and to construct thereon a national air policy which will conclusively end ambiguity and striving for power. I propose for discussion this specific legislative policy statement:

1. That the United States shall develop and maintain maximum technical and material readiness in every branch of aerial warfare, with particular emphasis on achieving control of the air by all means and under all circumstances, and on the development of flexible, multipurpose aircraft for maximum safety and economy.

2. That American national air power shall comprise both the U. S. Air Force and Naval aviation, as coordinate and equal elements, each administered separately within its own department.

3. That the Air Force, in addition to providing land-based air forces for close cooperation with and direct support of Army forces, shall maintain the land-based component of our general air power. The "general air power" shall include every strategic and tactical application of air weapons other than in close cooperation with ground and surface forces, and shall apply equally to Air Force and naval aviation.

5. THAT within these limitations neither service shall be restricted in the development of weapons for any mission whatsoever.

6. That any service charged by the Joint Chiefs of Staff with the planning of any broad mission, or with the exercise of unified command, shall explore and utilize every potential of the weapons and forces of other services, regardless of the original designed function of the weapons or the basic mission of the other service.

This policy statement promotes the following basic objectives:

(a) Parity of status between coordinate air arms of equally distinguished attainments; anything less breeds had morale in the subordinated group.

(b) Unlimited development of the best new weapons and forces by the service most experienced in each type of weapon.

(c) Unlimited utilization of forces, on a unified rather than service basis, for whatever national missions they may prove most useful.

I believe that if this statement should be made the unmistakable basis of national policy, we should soon see an end to bickering.

I believe we can then begin to consider joint training, joint education, interservice exchange of personnel, with some confidence that the treatment will take. We will then be able to count on a true unification, not the hollow words all sides utter today.

Our Political Economy

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

Parity Politics

FARM PARITY, 1949, is a little like a ship which has not had its bottom scraped for many years. It has accumulated so many barnaces that the weight threatens to sink it.

A bemused public, watching last week's antics over the farm bill, may well have begun to wonder what it was all about. Unfortunately, the economics of farm subsidies has been all but lost in the politics. When things get too confused, there is only one solution: ignore the tangential issues and get down to essentials.

To put it in its simplest terms, our farm support program is a political attempt to give the farmer a higher share of national income than would be his under free market conditions of supply and demand.

Dr. Rennie is assistant professor of economics at Johns Hopkins University and formerly was international fiscal analyst for the Federal Reserve Board. Mrs. Rennie, a former State Department official, is author of history of Argentina and has written articles for Harper's, Foreign Affairs and the Foreign Policy Association.

Bear this in mind when we talk of that mystical concept called "parity." The Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933 defined parity as "that price for the commodity which will give to the commodity a purchasing power with respect to articles that farmers buy equivalent to the purchasing power in the base period . . ."

For many years, the base period has been 1910-1914, an era when farmers got an uncommonly high share of national income. More recently, the Secretary of Agriculture has shifted the base of many individual products to the current period. In view of recent abnormal demand, this makes parity even more favorable to the farmer.

FARM PRICE supports cost a great deal of money, just how much nobody knows. Part of the cost comes from taxes, yet this is undoubtedly the smaller source. Most is taken from the consumer in high food bills. At the same time, price guarantees encourage mounting farm surpluses.

During the war there was justification for encouraging production. Today, however, the program has become like the magic broom in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice": it brings in more and more water, until it threatens to drown us. And like the terrified apprentice, we stand by quite helpless because we don't know the magic word to stop all this piling up of agricultural surpluses.

This newspaper told the stories of fortunes made in potatoes while spuds rot in heaps. We read of dried eggs taxing Government storage capacity, though Grade A's are going for 80c a dozen.

All this does not make sense. The consumer is taxed to raise his own food bill, the farmer is dissatisfied at Government controls, and even farmers wonder whether the program is not growing so unwieldly it will collapse of its own absurdity.

THE AIKEN LAW of 1948 provided for lower and flexible farm supports beginning next July. Under this act, price guarantees could be lowered if commodities were overproduced. This was a move in the right direction.

This session, the House passed the Gore bill providing for the old inflexible 90 percent of parity. The Senate's Anderson bill, like the 1948 law, provided eventual price flexibility.

Yet any type of price support is a tax on the consumer. He pays the cost in his food bills.

Realizing this, Secretary Brannan had suggested something new in farm programs. His proposal was to keep price supports on storable commodities, like grains, but on perishables to let prices seek their own free market levels. The difference between this free price and the parity level would be made up by the Government.

Congressmen reacted to the Brannan Plan as if they had just sat on a hot stove. The reason is simple. For the first time, most of the cost of farm subsidies would appear on the taxpayer's bill. He would know, in short, how much was going from his pocket into the farmer's. To Congressmen who must face the voters in 1950, this was a horrid thought.

FOR ESSENTIALLY, of course, farm subsidies are a transfer payment from one segment of the population to another. Transfer payments are not necessarily immoral: we make them when we give pensions to veterans or Federal subsidies to housing.

When such transfer payments come out of tax money, the rich foot much of the bill, because they pay high income taxes. When, as at present, the transfer comes in the form of a hidden tax on food consumption, it is highly regressive. The poor are hardest hit.

This is not to say that the Brannan Plan was necessarily a good one. It had undesirable features, including cumbersome administration.

On the other hand, the present hodge-podge of price supports is something of a misbegotten monstrosity. Even our confused lawmakers see this.

HERE ARE the main objections to price supports:

First, any base period, such as 1910-14, is bound to become anachronistic. A base period favorable to farmers may be one when labor was relatively underpaid. Are we going to legislate now to freeze labor's share of the national income at a low level? For, of course, parity for farmers means forcing the rest of the economy back to its status in the base period. That status may be fine for the farmer. But how about labor and industry?

And secondly, the free price system—to which we pay so much lip service, and so little else—guarantees the most economical use of manpower and resources. It would not keep thousands of men down on the farm to produce eggs and potatoes which are now rotting in storage. Labor would go where it was needed, and would lower the cost of other things we wanted more.

Subsidies cut down our real national income by uneconomic distribution of resources. That is the real "cost" of farm supports: the men and machines wasted in turning out food we do not need at prices we cannot afford to pay.

But many first-rate economists think farm supports, in some form, are a good idea. Their argument is that if wages and the price of basic commodities are stabilized there is less likelihood of economic collapse. They do not necessarily say, as some have, that "depressions are farm-bred and farm-led"; but they do believe it is not good to let farm prices pull down the rest of the economy.

There is no sure way of testing this view without waiting for less prosperous times. In the meantime, we could cut down on some of the more grotesque aspects of present law: the mythical base periods and regressive price supports.

Perhaps this takes more courage than Congressmen have, or are likely to acquire. The alternative could be a consumer's revolt which would knock the whole program to pieces. Even farm spokesmen have seen this. Some day, Deo Volente, farm bloc diehards may take off their smoked glasses and see it too.

17 States Approve Bonuses Totaling $2,094,950,000

New York, Oct. 16 (AP)—Seventeen states have approved cash bonuses totaling $2,094,950,000 for veterans of the second World War, according to a study published today by Tax Foundation, Inc.

The non-profit research organization said $845,000,000 more will be added by the end of 1950 if voters act favorably on referendums pending in four other states.

Since 1921, said the tax foundation, bonuses have been defeated by legislatures in 21 states—sometimes more than once.

States with pending referendums, and the amount of proposed bonus for each, are Missouri, $150,000,000, November 1950; New Jersey, $105,000,000, November 1949; Pennsylvania, $500,000,000, November, 1949; West Virginia, $90,000,000, November, 1950.

The tax foundation listed these state bonuses as having been approved: (state and amount):

Connecticut, $51,750,000; Delaware, $7,500,000; Illinois, $385,000,000; Indiana, $105,000,000; Iowa, $85,00,000; Louisiana, $60,000,000; Massachusetts, $180,000,000; Michigan, $270,000,000; Minnesota, $84,000,000; New Hampshire, $6,000,000; New York, $400,000,000; North Dakota, $27,000,000; Ohio, $300,000,000; Rhode Island, $20,000,000; South Dakota, $30,000,000; Vermont, $3,700,000; Washington, $80,000,000.

Over-Ocean Flights Made By AF B-36s

By The Associated Press

The long-legged B-36 bombers are making excursions far out over the oceans in their routine training flights.

The Air Forces disclosed this much yesterday but declined to say how far or to what areas these crew-training and "shakedown" flights range while controversy rages in the Capitol about how good the big ships really are for war.

To a question, an Air Force spokesman said the B-36s are flying "in almost all directions" on their long distance hops.

All trips are nonstop missions. Up to now, no B-36 has landed on any field outside the continental United States, with the exception of bases in Alaska, where a few B-36s have been sent for Arctic tests.

These trips, it was said, have been equal to or greater than the 9000-mile nonstop flight of a B-36 about a year ago from Texas to Hawaii and return. On one mission of over 10,000 miles, a B-36 carried a 5-ton bomb load which it dropped beyond the half-way mark of the flight.

Because most of the training missions are carried out at high altitude (the B-36s normal bombing altitude is above 40,000 feet), few, if any, of the huge bombers have beeen sighted either over land areas or islands above which they fly or by ships at sea.

Polio Researcher Reports Progress

New York, Oct. 16 (U.P.)—An "answer" to the mystery of poliomyelitis "will be forthcoming in the foreseeable future," the research director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis said today.

Dr. Harry M. Weaver said National Foundation grants are supporting 68 investigations to find a preventive or cure for the disease. "We have learned enough to know we are traveling the right road," he said.

"Work is going forward toward the development of a preventive vaccine, of a serum to prevent paralysis, and of a drug effective in treating infantile paralysis," Dr. Weaver said.

"Great progress has been made in the treatment of respiratory paralysis, responsible for the largest number of polio deaths. We have developed better equipment and better methods of treating these patients, weaning them from the respirators at an early date."

Dr. Weaver said research aimed at developing a method to control the disease "now has reached the point where all logical avenues to approach open to study are being pursued with utmost speed."

"The National Foundation's program of research is so inclusive today that an answer will be forthcoming in the foreseeable future," he added.

His announcement was made following the semian..ual meeting of advisory committees concerned with research and education in the March of Dimes organization.

Vitamin Lacking

Diet Blamed In Hardening Of Arteries

San Francisco, Oct. 16 (AP)—Hardening of the arteries may be caused by a dietary shortage of one of the lesser known B vitamins, pyridoxine, two University of California medical researchers reported today.

Monkeys deprived of the vitamin for periods varying from 5½ to 16 months developed some degree of artery hardening, said Dr. James F. Rinehart and Dr. Louis D. Greenberg, pathologist. They reported in the American Journal of Pathology.

A similar group of monkeys given pyridoxine in their food throughout the test did not develop the disease.

The hardening developed much as it does in human beings the experimenters said. To get a sufficient amount of blood through the thickened artery the heart had to pump harder, increasing the blood pressure level.

Dr. Rinehart reported the hardening was in chronic form, not just a temporary rise in blood pressure.

Pyridoxine, also known as vitamin B-6, is normally present in yeast, liver and many vegetables.

The researchers now are attempting to find out how much pyridoxine there is in the diets of healthy people and those with hardened arteries.

back will produce one dwarf animal, the experts agreed, just as one abnormal individual is produced. But all said that they had never heard of an entire herd of dwarfs without normal animals.

Dr. Green said his theory of a pituitary deficiency was "strictly a guess" but he added that the animals' dwarf stature could not have been caused by a feed deficiency, malnutrition or radioaction.

A feed deficiency or malnutrition would cause the animals to grow disproportionately or appear starved, he said.

Radioaction would produce real freaks, he said, with three ears, or extra legs.

"It may be possible that a herd of normal Herefords with only a few dwarfs wandered into this canyon once and only the normal animals could get out, but I don't know how probable that is," Dr. Green said.

"When the Government bought all the cattle during the drought of 1934, I personally saw thousands of animals and there was only one dwarf, so I don't think it's probable that one herd could contain more than one dwarf," he added.

Dr. Green said that it had never been proved whether dwarf cattle could reproduce. Dwarf cattle are so rare that there is very little literature on the subject, he said.

Wilmer Memorial Consecration Led By Bishop Gibson

The Rt. Rev. Robert F. Gibson, Suffragan Bishop of Virginia, yesterday officiated at ceremonies consecrating the Wilmer Memorial, an addition to St. Paul's Episcopal Church at Duke and South Pitt sts., Alexandria.

Assisting the bishop at the ceremony were the Rev. Stanley Brown-Serman of the Virginia Theological Seminary; the Rev. Percy Foster Hall, rector emeritus of St. Paul's, the Rev. Thomas A. Fraser, jr., its present rector, and the Rev. William Clebsch and the Rev. Perry Williams, both of the seminary.

The building, remodeled during the last four months to house a lecture hall, classrooms, kitchen and church offices, is named for the Rev. William Holland Wilmer, former rector of St. Paul's and founder and first rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette square.

Six Complete St. Elizabeths Nurse Course

Every life, whether it is long or short, may be a masterpiece, the Rev. Dr. Edward B. Willingham, pastor of National Memorial Baptist Church, said yesterday.

Dr. Willingham spoke at baccalaureate services in Hitchcock Hall for six graduates of the school of nursing of St. Elizabeths Hospital. Graduation ceremonies will take place at 8 p. m. today.

The clergyman said that if his life is to be a masterpiece, an individual must study the life of Christ and know its stature.

'Enemy' Sub Sunk As Navy Fleet Holds War Games

Aboard the U. S. S. Eldorado, Oct. 16 (AP).—An "enemy" submarine today was claimed to have been sunk soon after a 96-ship fleet sortied from San Diego for maneuvers—an invasion to recapture Hawaii from a mythical aggressor.

But the submarine was only one of a pack, and the invasion force under Rear Admiral B. J. Rodgers, Pacific war veteran, theoretically was under serious torpedo threat today.

The fleet airwing of 14 Flying Fortresses, equipped with the newest in submarine search radar gear, was on patrol protecting this task force when it sighted the "wolf pack" ahead.

The threat alerted a 38,000-man invasion force within hours after the biggest overseas amphibious exercise since the war got underway. It is "Operation Miki."

Jap Whale Fleet Snares 240 Mammals

Shimonoseki, Japan, Oct. 16 (U.P.)—A fishing company near Goto Island off Nagasaki prefecture on Kyushu Island was reported today to have made a catch of 240 whales, representing a value of 10 million yen, or roughly $28,000.

The whales, ranging from 2 to 10 meters in length, were bagged following the discovery of a school of 250 whales October 10.

Doctors to See How Amputees Can Be Aided

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

District physicians this week will be shown how they can give civilian amputees the same chance that crippled veterans and members of the armed forces get.

They'll be shown how an amputee team helps a patient attain perfect performance with an artificial limb and sends him back to take a proud place in life with both self and community respect.

The local demonstrations are to be the first of a Nation-wide series. The object is to build up civilian amputee rehabilitation teams in every city, according to Michael J. Shortley, director of the Federal Security Agency's Office of Vocational Rehabilitation.

"Approach Long Overdue"

Long used by the armed forces and Veterans' Administration, the team approach is to be demonstrated at the annual scientific assembly of the District Medical Society, which begins Monday at the Statler Hotel.

David Amato, chief of the D. C. Rehabilitation Service, said eight District men who have lost one or both legs will take part with a special amputee team.

"The team approach is long overdue for the civilian amputee," Amato said. "While such work is being done in some of our hospitals and clinics, many private patients have not been able to make the best use of their prosthetic arms and legs because no team existed for them."

The amputee team consists of the patient's own surgeon, a psychiatrist, physical therapist, limbmaker and vocational rehabilitation counselor.

Amato pointed out that it is generally estimated that one of every two persons in civilian life who have had to get artificial arms or legs have discarded them as painful or impracticable.

To Be Shown to Public

Though the demonstrations are mainly for doctors and surgeons, the amputee team techniques will be shown publicly at the exhibit booth in the Statler Tuesday between 7 and 8 p. m.

It would be difficult, Amato conceded, to gather busy surgeons, psychiatrists and therapists for a team survey of all future amputee clients of rehabilitation agencies. But such efforts are more than justified, he added.

"If we accept the statement that 50 percent of civilian amputees throw away their artificial limbs because they do not know how to use them, the elimination of this waste alone will justify the effort," he said.

P-TA to Meet Tuesday

Bladensburg Primary School P-TA will meet Tuesday at 8 p. m. at the school.

Local Priory Launches 25th Anniversary

St. Anselm's Priory opened its twenty-fifth anniversary celebration yesterday with a reception in honor of one of its founders and first prior, the Right Rev. Wulstan Knowles, now Abbot of St. Benedict's Abbey, Fort Augustus, Scotland.

Knowles

The reception, which started anniversary events lasting until November, was held at the Priory School auditorium, 14th st. and South Dakota ave. ne.

Abbot Knowles was presented a purse of $1200 by Washington oblates of St. Benedict. During the reception he recalled how the Priory was started in a sausage factory on its present grounds.

The Scottish Abbot was one of six members of the English Congregation of St. Benedict who founded the priory and in 1924 served as its first prior. Of the other five, Dom Benedict Brosnahan is still at St. Anselm's, Dom Thomas Verner Moore last year entered a Carthusian monastery in Europe, and the other three are dead.

In 1926 Abbott Knowles founded Portsmouth Priory in Portsmouth, R. I. and was its first prior. He was elected Abbot of The Fort Augustus Abbey in 1929 and re-elected in 1937 and 1944.

Sharman's Father Denies Romance

London, Oct. 16 (U.P.)—United States Ambassador Lewis Douglas, his wife and their daughter Sharman and her "friend" the Earl of Westmoreland returned tonight from a three-week vacation in Italy.

Asked if there is a romance between Sharman and the Earl, the Ambassador replied with an emphatic, "No."

Along Our Street

Tonight is the night of the church festival. It's taken days of preparation, but things have gone smoothly because all the committee members have worked so well together.

I think that's the secret of success in any undertaking. Teamwork is just as important among friends and neighbors as it is in sports, in business and lots of other things. I know that's true of party-line telephone service.

Teamwork on a party line means allowing an interval between calls so that others may use the line . . . answering the telephone promptly . . . giving up the line quickly when it's needed in an emergency. When good party-line neighbors work together, they help themselves and everyone else on the line to better telephone service.

Scottish Rite Supreme Body Honors Pike

Scottish Rite Masons yesterday paid tribute to the memory of Albert Pike at services in the House of the Temple, 1733 16th st. nw.

Pike, considered the foremost Masonic author and historian, was called "the greatest Mason of all" by Judge Haslett P. Burke of Colorado, grand orator of the Supreme Council, in a brief eulogy of the former sovereign grand commander of the Rite.

Pike, who served as a general in the Confederate Army and as a justice of the Supreme Court of Arkansas, his native State, spent the last 40 years of his life in the service of Masonry.

Following the services, a wreath was placed on his tomb in the temple by Rene J. Raymond, grand commander of France; Fernand Clement, grand commander of Belgium; Frank C. Patton, lieutenant grand commander, and Luther A. Smith, grand master of state.

The biennial sessions of the Supreme Council, Thirty-third Degree, Southern Jurisdiction of United States, will get under way at 10 a. m. today in the temple. At 2:30 p. m. members of the council and distinguished visitors will visit the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon.

The highlight of the Wednesday session will be a visit to the White House at 11 a. m. when members of the council will pay their respects to President Truman. Mr. Truman is a thirty-third degree Mason and a past grand master of Missouri Masons.

Bowling Congress Bias Charged In CIO Action

The CIO, asserting that the American Bowling Congress holds a monopoly over the sport and that it discriminates against Negroes, said yesterday it is seeking revocation of the organization's charter.

Arthur J. Goldberg, CIO general counsel, said the CIO has asked legal officials in Illinois, where the ABC is chartered, to bring proceedings against it.

In Milwaukee, ABC Secretary Elmer H. Baumgarten said he thinks "the CIO has a poor chance of doing anything about it."

Baumgarten said the ABC does not have absolute control over the sport but "only over our own membership." He said many leagues and tournaments operate outside ABC control.

Of the CIO assertion that the ABC discriminates against Negroes, Baumgarten said: "What is illegal about it? There are literally thousands of organizations which restrict their membership to people of certain races or groups."

Montgomery P-TA Delegates to Meet

Montgomery County delegates to the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers which will convene in Baltimore November 3-5 will hold a pre-convention discussion of the agenda Thursday at 8:15 p. m. in Room 201 of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

Leading the discussion will be John A. McIntire, president of the County Council of P-TA; Mrs. Albert Gatley, jr., a vice president of the council; Mrs. David H. Stowe, district vice president of the state P-TA; Nathan R. Gilbert, state P-TA safety chairman and Leslie Abbe, legislative chairman.

Quirino Train Derailed

Manila, Oct. 16 (AP).—One car of a special train carying President Elpidio Quirino of the Philippines was derailed today in Communist Hukbalahap territory. But there were no casualties and the President and other members of his Liberal Party escaped with nothing worse than a shaking up.

10 Killed in District and Maryland Traffic

35, of 626 D st. se., and William Stone, 56, of Brandywine, Md. An inquest into Wright's death will be held, but no date has been set.

The accident in which Matthews and Mrs. Ontiveros died occurred, according to Prince Georges County Police, on Route 50, a mile east of Bladensburg. They said an auto owned by Charles A. Drake, 37, a painter, of 724 5th st. nw., apparently traveling at high speed, skidded on a curve, crossed the road to the left, sheared off a light pole, continued skidding, and rolled over.

Drake, they said, suffered minor injuries. After treatment at Prince Georges County General Hospital, he was booked on two technical charges of manslaughter and one of reckless driving by colliding. Police said Drake told them that Matthews, and not he, was driving the car at the time of the crash, but Pvt. J. W. Vincent, of county police, placed the charges. Drake was freed on $500 bond.

Printer by Trade

Matthews, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard J. Matthews. Besides his parents, he leaves a brother, Richard, and a sister, Mrs. Dorothy Oden. He was born at Clayton, N. C., and educated in public schools and Abbot Vocational School here. He was a printer, employed by Judd & Detweiler.

Mrs. Ontiveros is reported survived by her husband, John, from whom, acquaintances said, she was separated recently. Washington police were attempting, with Prince Georges County police, to locate him, and also find her recent residence.

In the accident near Sunderland, witnesses and Maryland State Trooper Donald Gibson said that George Sollers' car was traveling between 80 and 90 miles an hour, throwing a blue flame from its exhaust. It sideswiped a concrete bridge rail, hurtled across the road and struck a culvert, and continued for a total distance of 250 yards before coming to rest upside down.

Five Trapped in Flaming Car

The vehicle burst into flames immediately, witnesses said, with the five occupants trapped inside. The witnesses said there were no outcries and the five apparently were unconscious or dead as the flames raged around them. All the bodies were badly burned. They were taken to the Sewell funeral home at Prince Frederick.

The Pullen boy suffered a brain concussion, fractured leg and internal injuries when his motor scooter was in collision with a truck which police said was operated by Joseph R. Bordan of 5010 Branchville rd., Branchville. The accident occurred Saturday. Robert E. Hand, 13, of 601 Roxboro pl. nw., a passenger on the scooter, fell off. He was treated at Leland Memorial Hospital for face abrasions and released.

Perkins died of injuries suffered when, police said, he was struck in the middle of a block by an auto driven by Mrs. Blanche R. Lewis, 33, of 39 P st. nw., a nurse at Freedmen's Hospital. No charges were placed against her.

Air Force Corporal Hurt

Corpl. Donal J. Chadwick, 21, of the 1102d Maintenance Squadron, Bolling Air Force Base, was critically injured early yesterday when his motorcycle was in collision at S. Capitol and M sts., with an auto driven by James L. Bivins, 34, of LaPlata, Md. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital with a fractured skull, jaw, and left wrist.

Edgar A. Walston, 26, of 4513 Oliver st., Riverdale, Md., was in critical condition at Leland Memorial Hospital yesterday suffering from a fractured back, a chip fracture of the skull, and concussion.

Police said he was a passenger Saturday evening on a motorcycle driven by his brother, Donald R. Walston, 22, a student, of the same address. Crossing the overhead bridge above the Baltimore and Ohio tracks at Hyattsville, the cycle struck a curb and both were thrown. Donald Walston told them he was blinded by approaching automobile lights.

Hearing Set at Hyattsville

After treatment at Leland Memorial Hospital for cuts and bruises, Donald Walston was charged with reckless driving, by Pvt. Charles E. Williams of Hyattsville police. A hearing is scheduled November 17, at Hyattsville.

Mrs. Rena Mae Burroughs, 50, of 7510 Columbia ave., College Park, Md., and Mrs. Glennalene Hester, 27, of 4339 Spring st., Suitland, Md., were cut and bruised in an accident yesterday at the Silver Hill shopping center. Maryland State troopers said the accelerator on Mrs. Burroughs' auto apparently stuck and caused it to run into a signpost. Three children in the car were unhurt.

Three Manassas, Va., men were injured, one critically, yesterday when a pickup truck in which they rode went over an embankment and was demolished, on Route 211, about four miles east of Centerville, Va.

At Arlington Hospital, Ermest F. Snyder, believed to have been the driver, was in critical condition with head and possible internal injuries. The others were James L. Jenkins, 19, bruises and shoulder injuries, and Ray Parsons, 35, shoulder injuries. Sergt. Lewis Shumate of Fairfax County police said the truck apparently went out of control on a curve, and then over the embankment.

Falls Church Teen Canteen to Be Fixed Up; Gala Reopening Scheduled for Hallowe'en

Plans for a face-lifting job on the Falls Church Teen Canteen building, opened in June, 1948, as a recreation center for high school pupils, have been announced by the Recreation Commission.

The pleasant white building on Hillwood ave. near the high school will be closed from October 24 to 31 while volunteers repaint and repair its interior. A gala reopening party is planned for Halloween.

A membership drive to increase the roster of 350 is planned next month by the canteen's council, representing all five high school grades.

A dozen painters and carpenters have promised aid in the canteen's redecoration to John Koons, head of a special Recreation Commission committee. Parents also will be asked to help in renovation of the 20-by-130-foot prefabricated framer Army mess hall.

Organized as a "home away from home" for city youth, the canteen started with efforts of the Falls Church Teen Theater group to obtain a meeting place.

The members raised $1000 from plays, bake sales and cash donations. As funds grew, they worked with an adult board of trustees, recently merged with the Recreation Commission.

A surplus mess hall was procured from the Army. The Hillwood ave. site is leased to the canteen for $1 a year by Burns N. Gibson. Council, businessmen and civic groups chipped in to provide a floor, furniture and equipment. A group of doctors bought a drinking fountain and a television set, stove, electric refrigerator and piano were donated by merchants.

The canteen building, worth an estimated $20,000, including equipment, has a juke box, phonograph, radio, and facilities for ping-pong and badminton. It is open every afternoon and evening except Monday. A full-time director, Miss Frances Mayse, is paid $3600 a year from a $4000 City Council appropriation.

Special activities sponsored by the canteen include tennis instruction, an arts club now concocting murals for the canteen walls, and a theater club which last week presented a special Columbus Day radio program over WFAX.

When the program gets into full swing in November, Miss Mayse says, projects may include a supper club, riding club, crafts classes and dancing lessons.

Lack of outdoor athletic facilities is one of the biggest problems. Because the high school has no gymnasium or auditorium, winter athletics are next to impossible.

A special Recreation Commission committee headed by Mrs. Dorice Fought, one of the charter adult sponsors, will attempt to interest adults and civic organizations in sponsoring affairs at the center as a solution of the canteen's money difficulties.

WHEN KIDNEYS Work Too Often

Are you embarrassed and bothered by too frequent elimination during the day and night? This symptom as well as burning, itching passages, Bladder Irritations, Backaches, Strong Cloudy Urine, pressure over the Bladder, swollen ankles or rheumatic pains, may be due to temporary germ irritation and non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles. In such cases the very first dose of CYSTEX usually goes to work right now helping you these three ways: 1. Helps nature remove certain irritating non-specific germs in acid conditions. 2. Thus helps relieve a frequent cause of many aches and pains. 3. By relieving and calming irritated tissues, it helps reduce frequent or smarting passages day and night. Get CYSTEX from your druggist. Give it a fair trial under satisfaction or money back guarantee.

Bishop Flint Opens Asbury Methodist's Celebration

Methodist Bishop Charles Wesley Flint yesterday asserted that the "slogans of the era of independent individualism must give way to those of the era of interdependence."

He spoke at Francis Asbury Methodist Church, 3146 16th st. nw., in a service marking the beginning of a week's program celebrating the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the church.

Bishop Flint, in his sermon, declared that for a long time Christianity revolved around the "single center of the individual and his inviolability—the sacredness of his separate personality."

"Social Welfare" Now

In the world today, he said, "personal freedom must be correlated with social welfare."

A generally accepted idea in the past, the bishop said, was that a man "has a right to do as he pleases with his own."

Today, "when a man pools his own with that of others and becomes a small unit in a great group, he merges his ownership into group ownership, and surrenders his individual sovereignty over what he calls his own," Bishop Flint declared.

Personal Right Questioned

Referring to the larger group, Bishop Flint asked whether it may any longer "do as it pleases" with what it calls its own "at the expense of other groups, or without regard to general welfare.

"Has it any longer the right to hire and fire as it pleases, manufacture or not manufacture when and as it pleases, sell or withhold from the market when and as it pleases?" he inquired.

"The individual is now no longer an individual, but a fraction of a group," he said.

Next Sunday the church will conclude its week of anniversary events by burning the mortgage on the church and parsonage.

3,042 new trucks will be bought tomorrow

Will you be one of the buyers?

If so, you will want to weigh and consider the facts presented in this message. Regardless of the nature of your business—regardless of the size, type or purpose of the truck you plan to buy—this factual presentation should help you make a wise decision.

Let's Start with Buying Facts. During the first six months of 1949, according to the latest available registration figures, here's what happened:

★ Truck users bought more Chevrolet Trucks than the second-place and third-place makes combined . . . more than twice as many Chevrolet trucks as the second-place truck.

★ Chevrolet trucks accounted for 37.1% of all the trucks bought in America. Better than one out of every three trucks bought was a Chevrolet.

★ Buying of Chevrolet trucks went up 12% over 1948, whereas buying of all other makes combined dropped down 23%.

There can be only one answer to the overwhelming preference for Chevrolet trucks. It means that hard-headed truck buyers have looked the field over and discovered this fact:

Chevrolet trucks offer more for the money than any other trucks in the field

More Features. When you choose Chevrolet, you get more features you want . . . features that mean you can move goods more miles at lower cost, in greater comfort and safety. Chevrolet's Thrift-master and Load-master Valve-in-Head truck engines are world famous for economy. You get "power with economy" that translates itself into dollar-and-cents profits on hauling and delivery—lower cost per mile on operation and maintenance.

Chevrolet's splined rear axle hub connection is another feature that cuts your hauling costs. It adds strength and durability to the rear axle . . . carries big loads longer, reduces upkeep.

Then there's the "Cab that Breathes" to increase driver comfort and safety, and 4-Speed Synchro-Mesh Transmission on 3800 Series and heavier to "keep 'em rolling" on schedule . . . not to mention such other Chevrolet features as the Flexi-Mounted Cab, Uniweld all-steel cab construction, Full-Floating Hypoid Rear Axles in Series 3600 and heavier duty models, Hydrovac power brakes on Series 5000 and 6000 models, ball-bearing steering, wide-base wheels, and multiple color options. Put all the Chevrolet features together and they make Chevrolet a better truck buy for you.

Chevrolet currently is offering 81 truck models in 20 different series . . . on 9 wheelbases.

They include all types—conventional, cab-over-engine, "Dubl-Duti" (forward-control chassis), and school-bus.

They range in size and capacity from fleet sedan delivery models to massive carriers of 16,000 pounds gross vehicle weight—and the carrying capacity of heavy-duty models can be increased, their usefulness expanded, through the installation of special equipment such as oversize front axles, five-speed or auxiliary transmissions, oversize wheels and tires, oversize rear axles, or tandem-drive or trailing third axles.

More of Everything You Want. All Chevrolet's features and Advance-Design engineering combine to give you more of what you want in the truck you buy.

You want economy of operation—and Chevrolet, over the years, has become famous for its low operating cost.

You want reliability, freedom from breakdowns—and there Chevrolet scores again.

You want safety, comfort, low first cost and low maintenance cost. You get them all in Chevrolet.

So if you want to put your hauling or delivery on a more efficient, more economical basis—choose the truck that is first by far with America's truck buyers. You'll find, as they have found, that Chevrolet offers more features, more models, more of everything you want. You'll find that Chevrolet offers more for the money than any other truck you could buy.

Come In Today. Talk over your delivery and hauling needs with us. We welcome a chance to show you why Chevrolet trucks are the 2-to-1 favorite over the second-place truck. It's worth your while to find out.

Harris Offered Nats' Job, Heads East to Talk Over Deal; Baugh Tosses 4 Scores as Redskins Rout Bulldogs, 38-14

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Griffith Stadium, Oct. 16.—The New York Bulldogs were the first to take the field. They got a nice introduction, the last courtesy they could expect from the Redskins.

The park had a real homey atmosphere for Sammy Baugh, from the wide open spaces. There were wide open spaces in the stands, with the smallest crowd in years in attendance. Only 26,278 showed up. The carriage trade was in the $4 box seats, but the video set stayed home.

POVICH

Charley Ewart, the Bulldog head coach, was not going to eye-witness any fourth straight defeat. He passed up the game to scout the Giants vs. the Steelers at New York.

The officials were dropping so many handkerchiefs in the first quarter, you couldn't tell whether it was a football game or a flirtation.

JOE OSMANSKI picks up a nice long 48-yard first down for the Bulldogs on a pitchout from Bobby Layne and then another Joe, Golding, works the other end for 18 yards to the Redskins one-yard line. Admiral Whelchel glowers at his end coaches.

The Bulldogs have a touchdown—Yes? No? The answer is no. Golding goes into the end zone and fumbles, and the Redskins get the ball on a recovery by Frank (Long Time No) Seno.

The Redskins are not immediately sensational. Sammy Baugh loses 13 yards on an attempt to pass when he is rushed by Sabasteanski, Pregulman and Domanovich, a delegation from the Politburo, no doubt.

7-0, Redskins. Pete Stout goes over from the one-foot line after Baugh and Sandifer work the ball up from the Redskins' 40. The gentry who offered the Bulldogs and 14½ points, are breathing more freely.

DENOTE THE PASSING of seven minutes any way you like, but the Redskins have another touchdown. Sammy Baugh flipped one to Hal Crisler who took the ball on the two and stumbled into the end zone. It was a pretty pass by Baugh, but Crisler's catch was even lovelier to behold.

The Redskins' offensive team comes out of the game, but only for one play. Golding fumbles on the Bulldogs' 33, and Berrang recovers for the Redskins, and the Skins' attacking forces are ordered back into action before they can find their seats on the bench.

Enough of that nonsense, Baugh was thinking, so in one play he had 'em back on the bench again. He dealt one off the arm to Crisler for 33 yards and another touchdown, and the Redskins had a 21-0 lead.

Joe Osmanski barrels 38 yards up the middle to the Redskins four-yard line, and the customers are inquiring wha hoppened? Osmanski didn't find a hole, exactly. The Bulldogs cleared out the Redskin linemen and left Osmanski what you could call a half-acre of living space.

Touchdown, Bulldogs. Bobby Layne, the sneak, sneaked to the Redskins' 6-inch line, and then he sneaked across the goal. Nice quarterbacking, if no model to American youth.

HARRY GILMER, trapped on a pass, uses his last option and runs 29 yards to midfield, but he could save his breath. There is a handkerchief on the play, and the Redskins go 15 yards in reverse for holding.

Bobby Layne, hemmed in on a pass attempt, gets off a 55-yard run, but most of it is laterally. When the head linesman totals it up, Layne gets a five-yard gain.

Touchdown, Bulldogs. Shoults goes over from the 15-yard line on a wide handoff from Layne, but Heywood scores the touchdown. Shoults fumbled in the end zone and Heywood dropped the ball, just ahead of the plunging neckline of the Redskins' Tommy Mont.

28-14, Redskins. Baugh gives the ball to Sandifer 20 yards down field, and Sandifer scrambles 25 yards more for the touchdown with a lone Bulldog, hotly sniffing at his heels.

LAYNE COMPLETES a pass to Heywood and Tommy Mont winds up with the ball, 53 yards up field after filching Heywood's fumble. The Bulldog fumble now ranks second to Baugh as the Redskins' best weapon.

31-14, Redskins. They ask Dick Poillon to put his foot in it from the 21-yard line which he does, ignoring the angle.

38-14, Redskins. Dowda takes a pass from Baugh and the play covers 67 yards. There is a mixup with Campbell on the Bulldogs' 31, but Rowdy Dowda breaks away to go the whole distance.

The Bulldogs move to the Redskins' two-yard line with Rauch running the club and Nelson running 25 yards. Whereupon the Redskins whip out their secret weapon—the Bulldog fumble—and take the ball that squirts out of Muehlheuser's arms.

And now the Bulldogs are in foul shape. Trailing by 24 points, only 24 seconds to play, and they don't even have the ball. If they win, under the circumstances, it's going to take a tremendous trick play.

Hal Crisler Makes Three Spectacular Touchdowns

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The long, sticky fingers of Hal Crisler did a lot toward digging the Washington Redskins out of their Eastern Division, National Football League grave yesterday.

Towering Hal, who was supposed to be too injured to play, hung on to three touchdown passes with his talented talons as the 'Skins turned back the New York Bulldogs, 38-14, before 26,278 customers at Griffith Stadium.

Crisler clicked on aerials that covered 25, 32 and 44 yards, in that order.

That was all the Redskins needed to hand the lowly Bulldogs their fourth straight beating of the season. But for extra measure they added two other touchdowns and a field goal to give themselves a .500 record in four games.

Washington	STATISTICS	New York
16	First downs	16
178	Net yards gained passing	257
24	Forward passes attempted	29
18	Forward passes completed	14
287	Yards forward passing	131
45	Punting average	40.8
109	Total yards all kicks returned	168
5	Opponents' fumbles recovered	2
109	Yards lost by penalties	23

Of course Slingin' Sammy Baugh, who usually does, had a great deal to do with the victory. All Sammy did, by way of showing off for his wife and two sons in the stands, was to pitch the three touchdowns to Crisler, another to Dowda and set up the fifth six-pointer with a series of three tosses for 47 yards.

Poillon Kicks 5 Points

The only scoring in which old Sam wasn't involved, except to hold the ball, was a 21-yard field goal by Dick Poillon as the fourth period opened.

Those three points, just incidentally, gave Poillon the Redskin scoring record. They brought his total to 217 points in five years with the 'Skins, topping the mark by Andy Farkas between 1938 and 1944 by a single counter. Before the game was over he chalked up his two hundred eighteenth point with his fifth conversion of the day.

What Baugh, Crisler and company didn't do to the Bulldogs, the Bulldogs did to themselves. They fumbled seven times and on five of the occasions Washington recovered. Bulldog fumbles, as a matter of fact, were one of the Redskins' best weapons.

They started on the fourth offensive play of the game. That was after the invaders, on three brilliant running plays, slammed 67 yards down field to the Redskins 2-yard stripe. Halfback Joe Golding followed with a plunge into the end zone, but the ball spurted out of his hands to be recovered for a touchback by Washington's Frank Seno.

Four punts later, midway of the first period, the Redskins took over on the Bulldog 44 and under Baugh's management moved to the contest's first points. Sammy hurled three times to Dan Sandifer and the 'Skins were just four yards from a score. Fullback Pete Stout got only his head over the goal line on the first try from there, but on the second he wound up with his ear against the goal post and it was 7-0, Washington.

The second Bulldog fumble led more directly to a Redskin score. On that one, a few seconds after the teams changed sides for the second period Halfback Paul Shoults, a rookie from Miami of Ohio, let the ball slip. First Tommy Mont and finally Herb Shoener recovered for the home team and off it went, 70 yards to a score.

Two clipping penalties and one for holding were charged against the 'Skins as Baugh hurled and Stout rushed up to the Bulldog 25. At that point Crisler made the first of his sensational scoring catches, part of a big day's work which netted Hal 120 yards on seven catches.

The San Jose State wingman, who used to play with the Bulldogs when they were known as the Boston Yanks, was horizontal and stretched t ohis full 6-feet 4 inches, several feet in the air, when he took Baugh's perfect-placed toss above the goal line. With a somersault he came up with pay dirt and it was 14-0 favoring Washington.

In two minutes and 37 seconds Crisler, along with Baugh, was at it again. Another Golding fumble the first time New York tried to run the ball gave Ed Berrang a chance to recover for the 'Skins on the Bulldog 33.

The distance goalward was divided unequally into two plays. The first was a 1-yard line smash by Rob Goode. The second was a 32-yard repetition of the Baugh-to-Crisler business.

Almost a Collision

Refusing to make it a commonplace effort, Crisler took that one as he looked back at the Bulldog 5. He turned and stopped just in time to avoid a collision with a goal post.

The New York forces of Owner Ted Collins cut their deficit to only 21-7 for halftime with a 75-yard march just before the gun. Bobby Layne's 24-yarder heave to Ralph Heywood started it and Joe Osmanski's dash down the middle for 38 yards made a score immediately possible. On the end was Layne's 6-inch sneak over the middle, followed by Nick Scollard's first of two extra points.

Things were getting too warm for the home folks shortly after intermission when the Bulldogs romped 64 yards to make it 21-14. Golding made up for his earlier lapse a little with a 40-yard sprint

Griffith Says Bucky Asked to Be Considered

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Bucky Harris has been offered the job of managing the Nats and indications are that he will accept.

The "Boy Wonder," now 53, who piloted the Nats to pennants in 1924 and 1925, is en route from San Diego to Washington to confer with Club President Clark Griffith.

Griffith last night would not deny that he had been dickering with Harris, but merely said "nothing has been settled yet."

"Bucky Offered Job"

Griff admitted, however, that Bucky is headed East to confer with him in Griffith Stadium on either Tuesday or Wednesday.

From Bill Starr, president of the San Diego team that Harris managed this season, came word that "Bucky has promised to let me know by the end of this week whether he will manage Washington. He talked with Mr. Griffith last week and was offered the job."

Griffith admitted this also, explaining that he talked with Bucky principally about Irv Noren, the Hollywood outfielder the Nats purchased for $60,000. "I then asked Harris if he was hooked up for next year," Griffith added. "Harris replied 'no' but that he wanted to speak to me in Washington before committing himself."

One of Griff's Favorites

Other facts also supported the belief that Harris will come home again, succeeding Joe Kuhel this time.

1. Griffith has never deviated from the custom of appointing one of his old stars as manager.
2. Bucky is one of his all-time favorites.
3. He offered Harris a front-office job with the Nats last year, but Harris declined, to accept the San Diego managerial berth at a reported salary of $22,500.

At the Harris home in Chevy Chase, Mrs. Harris said she hadn't heard a thing about it, but that she wouldn't be surprised.

"But when's Bucky going to get out of that monkey suit and get a front-office job? He and Connie Mack are two of the oldest managers in baseball, aren't they?"

If Harris returns as manager of the Nats, he would be one of the few, if not the only, major league manager to pilot the same team on three different occasions.

Harris made his major league debut as manager with the 1924 Nats when he was but 27 years old. He not only managed the club, but played second base as well and took the Nats to their only World Series championship.

He won the pennant again for the 1925 Nats, and remained with the club until 1929, when he went to Detroit as manager.

He stayed with the Tigers until 1933 and switched to the Red Sox for one year, returning to Griffith Stadium again in 1935, remaining until 1943 this time when he switched over to manage the Philadelphia Phils.

He spent the 1944 and 1945 seasons at Buffalo, but returned to the majors as a manager in 1947 with the New York Yankees, piloting them to a pennant and a world's championship in his first year.

After the team finished third in 1948, he was replaced as Yankee manager by Casey Stengel, present New York pilot.

"I like Bucky very much."

Bears Upset Eagles, 38-21

Lujack Highlights Chicago Victory

By Jerry Liska

Chicago, Oct. 16 (AP).—The Chicago Bears parlayed Johnny Lujack's deadly passing into a 38-21 upset of the Philadelphia Eagles for the National Football League champions' first defeat in 12 games before 50,129 at Wrigley Field today.

The Eagles' first setback in four league starts this season dropped them into a tie with the Pittsburgh Steelers for first in the Eastern Division. Pittsburgh today downed the New York Giants, 21-17.

The Eagles, whose last previous defeat was a 37-14 loss to the Boston Yanks on December 5, 1948, led at one time in the second period, 14-7.

Philadelphia	STATISTICS	Chicago Bears
10	First downs	23
43	Net yards gained rushing	193
29	Forward passes attempted	27
16	Forward passes completed	16
213	Yards forward passing	258
1	Forwards intercepted by	2
18	Yds. gained runback interceptions	54
47.8	Punting average	40
166	Total yards all kicks returned	145
38	Yards lost by penalties	99

The Eagles' string of defeatless games included two games in 1948, and six exhibition starts and three league contests this season.

It was the third triumph in four loop starts for the Bears, a 10-point underdog in today's game, and left them still trailing the top-spot Los Angeles Rams (4-0) in the Western Division.

Lujack, who played almost the entire game, pitched two touchdown passes, scored himself on a quarterback sneak from the 1-foot line, and set up two scores with his aerials.

Champions' First Loss in 12 Games

in 26 flips for 240 yards was a 54-yard payoff dash by George McAfee with an intercepted pass in the final period.

The Bear scoring was completed in the closing minutes on a 20-yard field goal by George Blanda, Lujack's understudy.

But three touchdown passes by Quarterback Tommy Thompson were all the scoring the Eagles could produce against the hard-charging Bears.

Philadelphia's Steve Van Buren, league-leading ground gainer, was held to a net gain of only 15 yards in 15 attempts. The entire Eagle rushing net profit was only 42, while the Bears rolled up 103.

Eagles Take Lead

The Bears tallied first on George Gulyanics' short plunge after a Lujack-to-Hoffman pass swept to the Eagle 2. The first period ended in a 7-7 deadlock, however, as Thompson connected on a 16-yard scoring shot to Pete Pihos.

The Eagles moved in front for the first and only time when Thompson banged a pass to Van Buren in the clear for a 50-yard scoring play as the second period opened.

But the Bears came back with two touchdowns themselves in the second period for a 21-14 halftime lead. Lujack whizzed a 32-yard touchdown pass to Ken Kavanaugh. A few minutes later, Lujack moved the Bears 72 yards on four passes to the Eagle 3 and then sneaked over from the 1-foot line to score.

Each team scored once in the third period. The Bears counted on Lujack's 15-yard shot to Jim Keane in the end zone for a 28-14 Bear lead. But then Thompson worked a 64-yard scoring pass with Jack Ferrante, leaving the Eagles behind 28-21 as the third period ended.

McAfee sewed up the game with his interception of Thompson's pass and a 54-yard scamper to a touchdown, and Blanda added three extra points' insurance with his field goal.

Lujack booted all five of his extra point tries for the Bears, while Philadelphia's Cliff Patton added after all three Eagle scores to run his string of extra points to 70, just two shy of Jack Manders' league record of 72.

Rams Trail 10-0, Beat Out Lions, 21 to 10

Detroit, Oct. 16 (AP).—The undefeated Los Angeles Rams spotted the Detroit Lions a 10-point lead and then came from behind to post a 21-10 decision for their fourth straight win of the National Football League campaign before 21,420 fans.

The Rams were taken aback by Detroit's early attack which netted a touchdown and field goal in the first 16 minutes of play but then Bob Waterfield got the visitors rolling.

The Lions drove 40 yards in opening minutes of the game before their attack stalled on the Rams' 20. Bill Dudley then dropped back and booted a 28-yard field goal and Detroit led 3-0.

Shortly before the end of the first period the Lions got another drive rolling after Waterfield had kicked out on their 17. With Clyde LeForce completing five passes during the drive, the Lions covered 83 yards for a score.

End Johnny Greene accounted for the final 7 yards on a LeForce pass and Dudley's kick made it 10-0.

The Rams struck back late in the second period as they covered 61 yards in two pass plays for their first touchdown Waterfield first tossed a 13-yard pass to Tom Fears and followed it with a 48-yard touchdown pass to Elroy Hirsch. Waterfield's kick made it a 10-7 half-time score.

Los Angeles took the lead midway in the third period as it staged a 56-yard drive with Fred Gehrke covering the last 25 yards on a lateral from Dick Hoerner. Waterfield's kick made it 14-10.

The Rams got their final score in the last two minutes of the game when a LeForce pass was grabbed by the Rams' Jerry Williams on the Detroit 33 and he went over standing up.

Canisius Goes Down, 46-13

Olean, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP).—Three touchdown passes by Chris Scaturo and a 100-yard runback of an intercepted pass by Joe Pavlikowski gave St. Bonaventure a 46-13 victory today over its arch-rival, Canisius.

The win knocked Canisius from the ranks of the undefeated. Canisius handed St. Bonaventure its only defeat last year.

St. Mary's Beats Loyola

Los Angeles, Oct. 16 (AP).—The Maulers of St. Mary's recuperated from a one point halftime deficit today and went on to crush Loyola University, 27 to 14.

Trailing by 13 to 14 at the intermission, the galloping gaels lumbered out of the dressing room and overpowered Loyola with two quick touchdowns in the third period.

Yablonski Ties Field Goal Mark

Cardinals Hand Green Bay Third Setback in 39-17 Rout

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 16 (AP).—A pass interception gave the Chicago Cardinals a touchdown on the second play from scrimmage today and they kept right on going to whip Green Bay 39-17 in a National Football League game before 18,464 fans.

The Cardinals scored in every quarter and in every possible way to break a third-place western division tie with the Packers and shove them out of title consideration.

Ventan Yablonski, Cardinal kicker, tied a 10-year league record with three place-kicked field goals, one in the first period and two in the second. The record was set in 1939 by Ralph Kercheval.

Other Cardinal scorers were Vince Banonis, 232-pound guard who grabbed Jack Jacobs' only pass of the day on the second play and trundled 27 yards to score; Vic Schwall, on the end of a 17-yard pass from Paul Christman; Pat Harder, on a 15-yard burst through tackle, and Tom Wham, who intercepted a pass by Stan Heath and skipped 50 yards for the touchdown.

Harder kicked four extra points and Garrard Ramsey wound it up when he trapped Bob Cifers in the end zone after a fumbled punt with only seconds remaining.

On Two Passes

Steelers Beat Out Giants In Final Minutes, 21 to 17

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Pittsburgh combined a surprise air attack with New York Errors today to win a National football league game, 21 to 17, that opened the Giants' twenty-fifth season in the Polo Grounds.

Until late in the fourth quarter the Steelers had crossed the midfield only twice and but once under their own power. But they were in the ball game all the way and won out in the final minutes after Bobby Gage brought back a punt 50 yards to the Giants' 44 yard line.

Then Jim Finks, a youngster from Tulsa University, fired two passes to Val Jansante and the New Yorkers' silver anniversary celebration ended in sadness.

Joe Scott got both the New York touchdowns after Emlen Tunnell had started the Giants off, once by intercepting a pass and once by bringing back a punt. The New Yorkers' only other points came off the toe of Ben Agajanian, who booted a 24-yard field goal.

Pittsburgh began its scoring the first time it had the ball, moving 85 yards. Joe Geri blasted the final 9 feet.

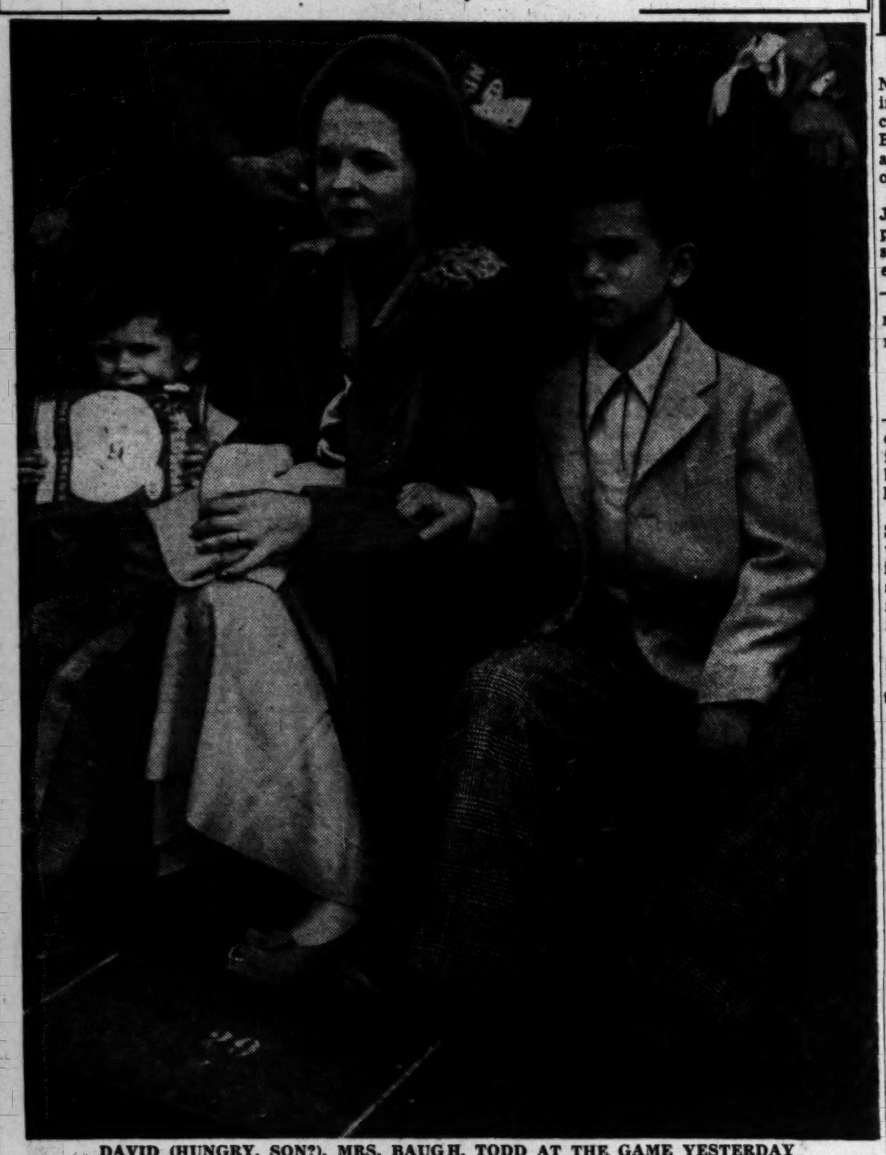
Baugh Boys' First Game

Todd Learns All About This Here Football; David Has Just 'Crackerjack' of a Time!



DAVID (HUNGRY, SON?), MRS. BAUGH, TODD AT THE GAME YESTERDAY

Sam's Sons See Him Run (Pass) for First Time

By George Garner

THIS EAVESDROPPER sat with the Baugh boys as they saw their famous daddy play football for the first time (more than that, their first game) at Griffith Stadium yesterday and witnessed the quick development of one of them into a football fan.

We were in section D: Todd (8), David (5), Mrs. Sammy Baugh; her mother, Mrs. Garry Smith, and Uncle Perrin and Aunt Charlotte, down from Philadelphia for the day.

Todd became the football fan in the second half. David remains just a 5-year-old with a wonderment over all the strange things going on about him.

But Todd, throughout the first half had the eternal why? of all curious youngsters, whether from a 5000-acre ranch near Rotan, Tex., or a tenement tot in New York.

David (silent) was seated between his mother (serene) and Mrs. Gray (calm); Todd was between Aunt Charlotte (explanatory) and Uncle Perrin (equally so).

TODD'S FIRST question, of course, was "Where's 33?" answering himself immediately: "Oh, there it is" as Daddy jogged into sight, the big numerals on his back.

He kept Aunt Charlotte and Uncle Perrin mighty busy through the first half. Aunt Charlotte: "There's Daddy, now talking with the referee."

"Why?" asked Todd.

Aunt Charlotte (Daddy was protesting because the officials said one of his passes was illegal) explained: "He's mad."

"Mad?" asked Todd.

"Provoked," Aunt Charlotte amplified.

"Provoked?" asked Todd.

"He's disgusted," said Aunt Charlotte, getting a little disgusted herself (with the scene on the field, not her nephew).

"Why?" asked Todd.

(David was looking through his telescoped program at the man making movies from atop of the grandstands across the way.)

"He didn't clip him," said Uncle Perrin, protesting an obvious clipping penalty against a Redskin.

"What's clipping?" asked Todd.

DADDY THREW all kinds of passes down the field and suddenly the Redskins were within striking distance of a touchdown. Then they bogged down momentarily.

With the determination that the inevitable just must happen, Todd spoke up: "Somebody's going to have to make a first down."

(David was distracted from his distraction by them there Indians up in the teepee, where a chief was waving a stick furiously and another was singing: "Bulldog, Bow-wow" into a microphone.)

During the introductory state (first half) and ascendency to young fanhood (second half) Todd was figetily posing for the photographer. He thought he was wasting too much time when those men with the fine, dark-and-light-blue uniforms were prancing the field.

But it was a changed Todd after the second half started. He was supplying answers to his own questions: "Get him," he'd yell when a Bulldog got loose. "All the way," he shouted when a Redskins struck suddenly out of the mass. "First down," he cried, when a Redskin bulled through the line. What more can an adult supply to prove his fanhood?

And that's the way the Baugh boys acted at their first football game.

(Somewhere during the third quarter David saw a candy butcher mounting the aisle steps and a yearning stirred deep in the heart of this particular little Texan. "Crackerjack," he said.)

Johnson's Field Goal Is Margin

Baltimore, Oct. 16 (AP).—The New York Yankees turned two intercepted passes into the decisive touchdowns to edge the Baltimore Colts, 24-21, today in an All-American Conference tug-of-war.

A 34-yard field goal by Harvey Johnson, the Yankees' automatic place-kicking specialist, in the second period proved the difference between the foes and accounted for the Colts' sixth loss in seven games. Kennedy also booted three extra points to run his string to 88.

The 32,645 fans in Babe Ruth Stadium were up and down the whole game with the lead changing hands five times. New York scored the clincher midway in the final quarter for its fourth victory in five games.

It came as a result of a blocked pass by Y. A. Tittle, whose tosses had the Yankees on the run throughout the game. Right Guard Ed Sharkey gathered in the ball on the Colt 3 and Bob Kennedy went over for his second touchdown.

Tittle threw two scoring passes and another set up the third touchdown. In the first period he collaborated with Billy Stone on a 36-yard six-pointer. New York matched this at the start of the second period on a 62-yard march which Kennedy climaxed by driving 4 yards. Johnson contributed his three-pointer a little later to put the Yankees ahead, 10-7.

But Tittle shot three straight passes good for 68 yards and a score to give the Colts a 14-10 edge at the half.

The first of Tittle's passes to backfire came at the start of the third quarter. Pete Layden grabbed the toss on the Colt 30 and twisted his way back across the goal to shove New York ahead again, 17-14.

Once more Tittle went to the air, flipping a short screen pass to Stormy Pfohl who zoomed 47 yards to the Yankee 18. Stone carried over on a 7-yard end sweep to regain the four-point margin for Baltimore. Soon afterward the Yankees grabbed the lead for keeps.

Williams, Millan Fight At Turner's

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez has four eight-round fights on tap for Turner's Arena tonight with Johnny Williams, Montgomery (Ala.) lightweight, tangling with Baltimore's Charley Millan in the top bout.

Williams holds a decision over Freddie Dawson, No. 1 lightweight challenger, as well as victories over two local battlers, Herbie Jones and Stonewall Jackson.

Millan is making his first appearance in Washington since losing to Dawson here nearly a year ago. Millan suffered a broken jaw in the ninth round, halting the bout.

Marshall Clayton, former All-Army lightweight king, with a 3-0 record as a pro, runs up against Earle Priestley of Atlantic City. Priestly also is undefeated as a pro, with seven wins to his credit.

Two local middleweights clash in another eight, Holly Mims and Artie Bethea. Mims owns a 10-round draw with District Middleweight Champion Ken Stribling, and is angling for another shot at Stribling's crown. Bethea also would like a chance to mix it with Stribling.

Confident for Penn Game

Navy's 'Worst Game,' Sauer Says of Wisconsin Fiasco

SOME DAYS it doesn't even pay to get out of bed, and that's exactly the way Navy Coach George Sauer felt Saturday after Wisconsin had plastered his Middies, 48 to 13.

Earlier, he and his players felt they were ready to sock Wisconsin and run Navy's winning streak to three in a row, but what a rude shock they got.

"Whew, we had a bad day . . . terrible," he repeated yesterday as he shepherded his squad from National Airport to Annapolis.

"If we don't improve 100 percent by next Saturday, we may as well not show up against Pennsylvania. But we'll bounce back, I'm sure. We did after the Southern California game (42-20, USC) and we'll do it again.

"They were ready and we weren't. That Wisconsin team is good, but not as good as the score indicates. We simply didn't play the game we played against Duke and Princeton. This was Navy's worst game. They outplayed us defensively and also outsmarted us.

"Bob Zastrow had his worst day, but he's still my No. 1 guy. I'll take him any time."

Zastrow had four of his first half passes intercepted and the resourceful Badgers ran for touchdowns with two of them and set up a score with the third interception.

But it wasn't all Zastrow's fault. Offensively, the Navy's line wasn't good. It didn't block for the 208-pound passing ace and Zastrow was passing with three or four of the big Badger linemen on him most of the time.

He completed one for a touchdown and that was a beaut. Two Badgers had him cornered, but he picked out Duff Arnold in the end zone just the same. But it couldn't go on like that forever and it didn't.

Frankie Hauff and Bill Powers, both with injured ankles, may miss the Penn game Saturday in Philadelphia . . . After Penn comes Notre Dame in Baltimore. If the 46-7 Irish rout of Tulane isn't in itself indicative of Irish power, listen to what Gene Kessler, of the Chicago Sun Times said. Kessler has been covering the Irish since 1919 and opines: "This is Notre Dame's best squad in 30 years."

Jersey Jolter Win Roller Derby Game From D.C.

Player-coach Carl Payne kept his New Jersey Jolters within hailing distance of the Washington-Baltimore skaters in their Roller Derby series last night at Uline Arena before 1268 fans when he scored two points in final two minutes of play to beat the Wildcats 13-11.

New Jersey, trailing the Wildcats four games to five, stands an even chance to deadlock the 12-game series at Uline's tonight.

Jack Wilson, Wildcat skater who was tossed over the rail in Saturday night's action, was released from Providence Hospital yesterday with bruised back and shoulder and will be skating tonight.

The Wildcat-Jolter series concludes Wednesday night and the Washington-Baltimore skaters will take on Broklyn's rough, tough Bombers in 11-game series extending through October 30.

Price, Povich Touchdowners' Guests Today

Press, radio and television men who cover sports will be guests of honor today at the Touchdown Club's weekly luncheon, 12:30 p. m.

Georgie Price, singing comedian, will also be among the honor guests.

Shirley Povich, The Washington Post sports columnist, will speak as will other local sportswriters and sportscasters. On-the-spot reports on the recent World Series and reviews of major football games of last weekend will be featured.

Brownell, Bogart Win Top Match

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—An all-star golf team from the District of Columbia outscored a team of Virginia's ace golfers here this afternoon, 13½ to 10½, in a best ball match.

Paced by Robert Brownell and George Voigt, who each carded rounds of 35 and 36 for 18-hole totals of 71, the Washington golfers took a commanding lead during the first three foursome and never were headed.

Billy Shea, also of the Washington team, shot two rounds of 36 for a 72 over the Farmington Country Club course.

Virginia's top team of Wynsol Spencer and Walter Hagen, jr., stayed even with Brownell and Ralph Bogart for the first nine holes, but the D. C. golfers finished 2 up in the feature match of the afternoon.

Results were as follows:

Brownell and Bogart, Washington, defeated Spencer and Hagen 2 up, scoring 2½ points to ½ point; Jim Gardner and Voight, Washington, defeated John Battle and James Watts, 5 and 4, scoring 3 points to 0; Claude Rippy and Bob Morris, Washington, defeated Benno Janssen and George Fulton, jr., 1 up, scoring 2 points to 1; Pat Janssen and Earl Howell, Virginia, defeated Ed Ault and Earl McKeer 1 up, scoring 2 points to 1; Shea and Maury Nee, Washington, defeated Irvin Blanchard and Harry Easterly 4 and 3, scoring 3 points to 0.

George Gosey and Raymond Lang, Virginia, defeated Don Miller and Ted Burrows 2 up, scoring 2 points to 0; J. B. Hall and Burr Melvin, Virginia, defeated Ray Swearingen and T. Manning 4 and 3, scoring 3 points to 0; William McFerren and Col. Ben Schriever, Washington, defeated Jack Harris and Meredith Watson 1 and 1, scoring 2 points to 1.

EAST POTOMAC—Earl Marcey, defending champion, turned in rounds of 73, 74 for a 147 total and a four-stroke lead over his nearest competitor for the club championship. Marcey, winner in three of the last four years, was followed by George Graham, 77, 74—151.

Dan Musser, 75, 76—151—6—145, walked off with the low net award, while Julian Williams, 77, 75—152—6—146, and Cecil Starnes, 80, 77—157—10—147, took second and third.

Marcey and Starnes combined to win the four-ball championship, 3 and 2, over Hank Robison and Russell Parks.

FORT DUPONT—Robert A. Plitt downed Sam Kononchuk, 4 and 3, to win the club championship. Dave Ahearn trounced Bernard King, 8 and 7, for the second flight title.

Catherine Nealis defeated Rachael Yap, 1 up, to take the women's crown while Margaret Rodger eliminated Doris Radix, 1 up, for the second flight award.

ANACOSTIA—Dr. R. A. Cole, 1947 titlist, defeated the defending champion, Danny Burton, 4 and 3, in the 36-hole championship match for the club championship. Cole, 66, 68—134, held a 5 up lead after 12 holes but Burton, 66, 70—136, birdied 13 and 14 before losing to a birdie on the fifteenth.

BETHESDA—Tony Popolaski played steady golf to win the club championship, 4 and 3, from Jerry Hart yesterday. Hart had reached the final with a 3 and 2 win from Jack Ferguson. Serge Folk defeated J. E. Williams, 3 and 1, for the second flight title.

WASHINGTON—Two teams tied for the Hackett Cup for mixed Scotch foursomes, Mrs. R. L. Brister and R. H. Rise, 83—14—69, were matched by Mrs. H. M. Nelson and G. Dimberg, 86—17—69. The runner-up slot went to two teams also, Mrs. J. P. Quick and Bill Miller, 90—20—70, and Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Ferry, 93—23—70. Low gross went to Mrs. W. A. Walsh and Lew Swartout, 80.

INDIAN SPRING—Mr. and Mrs. Gus Sasscer, 84—80—164—24—140, won the husband and wife tournament in a playoff with Dr. and Mrs. Sid Abramson. Buddy Sharkey, 69, plus 14, won the points tournament, while Lloyd Klenert, 83, plus 13, was second.

PRINCE GEORGES—Eddie Johnson defeated Joe Balestri, 3 and 1, to reach the final round of the club championship. Johnson will meet the winner of a match between Bob Morris and Gil Willett which was postponed yesterday because the two were in Charlottesville with the District amateur team.

Results in other flights: J. M. Miller defeated Garland Bowers, 6 and 4; Ted Tarrant defeated Charles Harmon, 1 up 19; C. Massey defeated L. Walker, 1 up; A. D. Snyder defeated S. M. Curtis, 3 and 1; Sam Markowitz defeated B. Kintz, 4 and 2; E. E. Johnson defeated Lou Heath, 4 and 3; C. Ingles defeated W. Wienpaul, 4 and 3.

Harris Offered Nats Job

San Diego club, but it is believed Veeck would not stand in Harris' way of returning to the majors. Veeck signed Harris to a two-year contract for an annual salary of $22,500 to manage the San Diego team.

Bucky, whose home is in Washington, has also been mentioned as a possible successor to Jack Onslow, manager of the Chicago White Sox, who has been having stormy goings with Frank Lane, general manager of the team. Onslow was signed to a two-year contract, but it is believed he will be paid off soon. A report in late August had Harris succeeding Onslow.

Kuhel, whose Nats finished seventh and eighth, respectively, during his 2-year tenure, was released recently by Griffith who said "Joe is a good baseball man, but we needed a change."

DEAR FOLKS: AT LAUREL

Dick Hutchison, president of Laurel raceway retains a keen interest in flat racing despite his close association with trotters. He owns a promising colt, a son of Sun Egret. Within the last few days mother nature has done her annual color job on the trees along the backstretch here. They always look more beautiful after you have a winner. Calumet Farm's Coaltown will carry the hopes of the Warren Wright barn in the Pimlico Special October 28. Last week at Laurel, and some interesting stakes scheduled including the famous Chevy Chase Steeplechase Handicap. See you on the rail.

Miss Bauer Beaten 3 and 2

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 16 (AP).—Beverly Hanson of Indio, Calif., stopped Marlene Bauer, the upsetting 15-year-old from Los Angeles, to win the fourteenth annual Women's Texas Open golf tournament today.

Beverly, who formerly played out of aFrgo, N. D., matched par to take a 2-up lead on the morning 18 holes. Then she withstood a late surge by the National Junior champion to close the match out on the thirty-fourth hole with a birdie.

Miss Hanson increased her margin to four up on the first nine holes during the afternoon with a one-under-par effort. Marlene sliced the advantage by winning No. 29 and No. 31, but she took a one over par five on the next hole to Miss Hanson's par, and they halved the thirty-third and thirty-fourth.

Wins, 13-7

Langdon Takes Lead In Metro

Langdon Lions took over the Metropolitan Amateur Football League's Eastern Division lead yesterday when they turned back the Western Division pace-setting Riverside Rollers at Taft Playground, 13-7.

Eastern A. C. defeated previously undefeated, untied Brookland-Woodridge Merchants at Turket Thicket, 13-6.

As a result of yesterday's third straight victory, Langdon moves into the Eastern Division's top spot while Eastern A. C., the only other undefeated league team, is trailing with two triumphs in as many starts.

Eastern AC scored on the second play of the game when Adrian Kidwell went 60 yards off left tackle to the goal and Ted Dyer place-kicked the extra point that proved the clincher.

Brookland-Woodridge also registered in the first quarter when Tommy Flint pitched a 30-yard aerial to Ed Brand, who carried 20 more to touchdown, but Joe LaBille missed the point try. Eastern scored again in the second period when Paul Pomento passed to Gil Ballantine in the end zone.

Arrow Linen forged into a three-way tie with Brookland-Woodridge and Eastern AC for second place in the Eastern Division when it defeated Southwest Merchants at Gonzaga, 13-0, while Casbah Restaurant rolled over Great Falls at Magruder Park, Hyattsville, 19-0.

49ers Smash Buffalo, 51 to 7, in Revenge for Earlier Loss

In Soccer Play

Sugar Radio Comes Back, Wins, 6 to 0

Sugar Radio, defending champion in the Washington and Suburban soccer league, snapped back from their upset loss to Marlboro last week to trounce Charles County, 6-0, yesterday at the Rosedale Playground.

Sugar held a 4-0 lead at half time and were never seriously threatened after getting their first score in the first minute of play.

LINEUPS

Sugar Radio—Goal, A Vermilion; backs, Stasulli and G. Simonds; halfbacks, Colander, Hook and Carroll; forwards, P. Simonds, Fowler, McBain, B. Vermilion and R. Simonds.

Charles County—Goal, J. Hancock; backs, Heack and Bader; halfbacks, Cooksey, Gray and C. Hancock; forwards, Hickey, Hardesty, Olson, Elde and Bowley.

Half-time score: Sugar 4-0. Goals scored by P. Simonds (2), Fowler, R. Simonds, McBain, Stasulli. Referee, A. Freitag.

Pan American Wins

Pan American continued its winning way yesterday by defeating the French eleven 6-0, at 16th & Kennedy.

The losers had several opportunities of scoring but could not quite overcome the opposing defense at the crucial moment.

Washington French—Goal, Liuzzi; backs, Creston and Callais; halfbacks, Brinad, Bouchet and Lecontre; forwards, Andrin, Dubois, Grigillo, Patreil and Ros.

Caruso's Beaten, 2-0

Martin's Bakery had most of the play in their match with Caruso's but scored only twice in winning 2-0.

Indian Head Loser

Indian Head opened its home schedule by losing to the visiting Greek-Americans, 3-1. The Washington players held the upper hand throughout but the home defense put up a stubborn battle, particularly in the closing period. Cokinas started for the winners.

LINEUPS

Indianhead—Goal, Custer; backs, Richardson and Maddox; halfbacks, Hoffman, Strickland and Murray; forwards, Swain, Sullivan, Goody, Shelton and Resin.

Greek-Americans—Goal, Samos; backs, Cokinas and Paul; halfbacks, Deoudes, Argyropoulus and Polis; forwards, Mentos, Stamster, Straddis, Cretsos and Scorletins.

Marlboro Wins, 7-0

Marlboro had little difficulty in defeating Gaithersburg 7-0 on the losers field.

LINEUPS

Gaithersburg—Goal, Matthews; backs, Nootenboon and Waddell; halfbacks, Eaton, Davidson and Wacther; forwards, Black, Poole, Buzzard, Crim and Schwarzback.

Marlboro—Goal, Turner; backs, K. Vermilion and C. Buck; halfbacks, R. B. Black, R. Stack and T. Vermilion; forwards, A. Bader, Freeman, Mondorff, T. Bader and Wyvill. Referee, R. Burton. Goals scored by Freeman (2), T. Bader (2), Wyvill (2), A. Bader. Half-time score, 5-0.

Sons of Italy Tied

A tough game on the Constitution Avenue field between Sons of Italy and Uncle Billies, finally ended in a 4-goal tie.

Uncle Billies—Goal, Roberts; backs, Kneesi and Alscher; halfbacks, Rutson, Houchen and Melvin; forwards, Kuner, Mirones, Carrington, Tierney and Pickett.

Irish A.C. Wins Over Allentown, 13-0

The Irish A. C. defeated Allentown, 13-0, yesterday to preserve their undefeated unscored upon record with its third win. Benny Padgett and Charles Ringler tallied for the Irish and Ringer added the concersion by placement.

Albert Leads Way in Rough Game

San Francisco, Oct. 16 (AP).—San Francisco's Forty-Niners reeled off another lap in their drive toward the All America conference pro football championship today. They smashed the Buffalo Bills—only team to beat them this year—51-7.

A crowd of 35,476 sat in on the proceedings.

Quarterback Frank Albert turned in a superb job in running the Forty-Niner attack. He threw three touchdown passes, two to Left End Paul Salata, good for 20 and 18 yards respectively.

Buffalo mustered a first period scoring drive but was held in check thereafter.

San Francisco leads the league with five wins and one defeat.

The 49er win evened the score with Buffalo, which beat the Forty-Niners 28-17 in Buffalo Sept. 26.

The game was the roughest seen here this season.

San Francisco lost its ace halfback, John Strzykalski, probably for the balance of the schedule. He suffered a fractured bone in his left leg and will be unavailable for eight weeks.

Chet Adams, left tackle for Buffalo, and Homer Hobbs, left guard for San Francisco, were ejected from the game for slugging each other.

The Forty-Niners took command at the start. They scored two touchdowns in the first period. San Francisco added 23 points in the second quarter, three touchdowns and a safety.

Additional touchdowns were rammed over in the third and fourth periods.

Buffalo	7	0	0	0	7
San Francisco	14	23	7	7	51

Buffalo: Touchdown — Sutton. Point after touchdown—Adams (placement). Safety—Wyshicki.

San Francisco: Touchdowns—Perry (3), Beals, Salata (2), Wallace. Points after touchdowns—Vetrano, 7 (placements).

Baugh, Crisler Lead 'Skins to 38-14 Win

through the middle. But even while they were scoring the Bulldogs couldn't keep from fumbling.

Shoults went over from 14 yards out, but let the ball get away. Mont appeared to have recovered for Washington but he too fumbled. Heywood finally winding up over the ball.

That was all for the Bullodgs. The 'Skins moved back into a 14-point lead in the middle of the quarter when a Layne passing attack fizzled on the Redskin 23. Baugh mixed two good passes with three running plays and came up with his third successful bit of cooperation with Crisler.

Crisler took Sammy Baugh's 19-yard offering over the protest of Golding, spun cleverly and then raced the last 25 yards as the Bulldogs strung out in hopeless pursuit.

Poillon's field goal opened the final quarter and made no more difference than the Redskins' fifth touchdown in the eventual winner. After that three-point clincher came Layne's 52-yard pass assault down field to the Redskin 23. But there Washington took over and closed out scoring.

In four plays the 'Skins had moved only 10 yards. The fifth did the dirty work—for New York. Baugh was passing from behind his own 33 (yard line, as well as jersey number) when he let fly at Dowda on the Bulldog 31. The Wake Forest rookie twisted out of the grip of Bill Campbell as he took the ball and went the rest of the way in the longest scoring play of the day, 67 yards.

Baugh finished another of his brilliant performances with 16 completions in 20 attempts, amassing 264 yards, while Layne's 13 connections on 27 passes picked up only 124 yards. Harry Gilmer, Sammy's understudy, tried only four aerials and clicked on half of them.

Navy Wins 7 of 12 Regatta Events

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 16 (AP).—Navy skippers captured seven out of 12 races today to defeat five college rivals in a dinghy regatta opening its fall regatta season.

The seven victories helped the Midshipmen compile 75 points. Next came Georgetown with 66 points; Stevens Institute of Hoboken, N. J., 45; Colgate, 36, and St. John's College of Annapolis, 31.

Sally Blauner Rides Titlist

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Sally Blauner of Bethesda guided her chestnut mare, Three's a Crowd, to the hunter championship at yesterday's fall show of the North End Stables in Silver Spring.

Three's a Crowd, ridden by her owner, earned the blue ribbon in the warm-up hunters, open hunters and hack and hunter classes, and a second in the young hunter's class for a near perfect score of 16½ points.

Amigo was ridden in the afternoon's senior events by the accomplished open rider Gardner Hallman for a top score in the tough modified Olympic class and the open jumpers and a third award in the warm-up event.

Avan Shockey's, greatly improved, Red Knight was also ridden by Gardner Hallman to a good win with the only clean performance, in the touch-and-out-class, a second in the modified Olympic event, and a fourth in the warm-up class for the runner-up position in the open jumper division.

Noted Throat Specialists report on 30-day Test of Camel Smokers...

NOT ONE SINGLE CASE OF THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking CAMELS!

Yes, these were the findings of noted throat specialists after a total of 2,470 weekly examinations of the throats of hundreds of men and women who smoked Camels—and only Camels—for 30 consecutive days.

Meet MISS RITA TENNANT, Seattle secretary, who recently made the 30-Day Test of Camel MILDNESS under the observation of a noted throat specialist.

ALTHOUGH SHE'S SMOKED many brands, Rita changes to Camels for her 30-Day Test. Like the other smokers in the nationwide test, her throat is examined every week by a specialist.

AH! SATURDAY—OFFICE CLOSED! Off to the tennis courts for Rita! She calls time-out for a Camel and confides: "I am really delighted to be making the test. Every Camel tastes so good!"

30TH DAY...FINAL EXAMINATION! Her doctor reports NO SIGN OF THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking CAMELS! Rita remarks: "And smoking is really fun with Camels!"

IT'S FUN! Smoke Camels—and only Camels—for 30 days. Compare them in your "T-Zone" (T for taste, T for throat). Let your throat tell you about Camel's cool mildness. Let your taste tell you about Camel's wonderful flavor.

YES, MY DOCTOR'S REPORT JUST PROVED WHAT MY OWN THROAT TOLD ME ABOUT CAMELS—THEY'RE SO MILD! AND THEY TASTE SO GOOD!

No Other Encyclopedia Publisher Ever DARED Make Such an Offer!

VOLUME ONE

OF THIS BRAND NEW 20th-CENTURY ENCYCLOPEDIA

YOURS TO KEEP for 10¢

AND YOU DON'T HAVE TO BUY ANYTHING ELSE!
—SEE FOR YOURSELF THESE VOLUMES ARE THE MOST EXTRAORDINARY VALUE EVER OFFERED!

TODAY we announce one of the rarest events in the history of publishing—the first edition of a brand-new, modern, twentieth-century encyclopedia—newer than any other, and as authoritative a work as ever appeared in the English language.

And we are ready to make you an outright gift of Volume I of this great new encyclopedia. Send us ten cents to cover only the postage, and by return mail you get the book pictured here. You get a beautiful big volume—8⅝ inches high by 5¾ inches wide, by over an inch thick—containing 424 pages, with double-columned text—magnificently illustrated with hundreds of pictures, diagrams, full-color maps and paintings—containing nearly two thousand separate articles on that many different subjects and a quarter of a million words—the size of several ordinary books!

Why should we make so unprecedented an offer? Because we want you to SEE and READ the sensational New Funk & Wagnalls Encyclopedia. We want you to KNOW that everything you have heard and will hear about it is true—that no encyclopedia ever written or sold at any price surpasses it for American home use. We want you to COMPARE this encyclopedia with any other—even those selling at hundreds of dollars each. And finally we want to offer you an opportunity to receive the other volumes of this extraordinary 36-volume set at just a small fraction of that price, and under a unique, pay-as-you-go plan that will not tax your pocketbook.

FINEST ENCYCLOPEDIA EVER WRITTEN FOR HOME USE

It is difficult indeed to picture for you the tremendous, almost incalculable hoard of knowledge this encyclopedia contains. The entire 36-volume set contains OVER FIFTY THOUSAND SUBJECTS IN SEPARATE ARTICLES—every subject you could list if you spent months in dreaming a list—and thousands upon thousands more, beyond all imagination. The entire set contains EIGHT AND A HALF MILLION WORDS—more than you could read in years of spare-time reading—more knowledge than it is possible for any one man to learn if he spent a lifetime on it.

For almost five years now a great editorial staff and a contributing and consulting board of eminent scholars have labored to compile, edit, write and rewrite, and to illustrate this huge compendium of knowledge. The departments of our own and foreign governments, schools and colleges, museums and libraries, zoological and botanical gardens, observatories and research laboratories, industries and institutions of every kind—world-famous experts and specialists everywhere—all have contributed their efforts to erect this great monument to American genius—The New Funk & Wagnalls Encyclopedia.

Yet all this gigantic storehouse of facts is so clearly and usefully arranged that you can find whatever you want to know in a moment! Every subject is so plainly and simply written that anyone can read and understand—even a child can use the volumes to help with his schoolwork! And he will be fascinated by its 10,000 maps, diagrams, and pictures. You will see, when you receive your first volume, what we mean when we say this is the finest encyclopedia ever made for home use.

Imagine the pleasure you will have in owning so magnificent a work. And you can have it at unbelievably low cost!

VOLUME I ONLY 10¢ — TO HELP YOU DECIDE IF YOU WANT THE SET

We want you to see and read a volume of the set, so that you will really know how wonderful it is. And for that reason we are willing to give you the actual first volume for just the postage it costs to mail the book to you—only 10¢. There is no obligation on you to buy any other volumes. You send us 10¢; we send you the book; and it is yours to keep.

Merely clip out Certificate below, fill it in with your name and address, and send it to us with only 10¢. By return mail we send you Volume One. Look it over thoroughly. Note the handsomely designed binding, in attractive tan, linen-weave cloth, decorated in red and black, with gold stamping. Note the specially designed, marbled endpapers — the many full-page pictures in full color—the thirty-two page full-color Hammond Atlas of every country and state in the Western Hemisphere. Note the smoothly finished, high-quality paper of the pages, reproducing the hundreds of photographs, pictures, and text sharply and clearly. Read some of articles—look up something you want to know. You have never used a reference work more comfortable to handle, simple to use and to understand, and interesting to read.

UNIQUE BOOK A WEEK PLAN

After you have examined Volume I you can then decide whether or not you want the rest of the set. If you decide you do not want any other volumes, all you do is drop us a line saying so, by letter or postcard, so that we will know your decision. You do not need to explain or apologize—merely say you do not want any more books. You keep the Volume I, because it is yours.

If, however, you DO want the rest of the set, you do nothing at all. Automatically, then, you will be sent other volumes as they come off press, at the rate of about a volume a week. Two weeks later you get two more volumes, and then three volumes every month thereafter until your set is complete. And you pay for each group of volumes AFTER you receive them.

Now here's the biggest surprise of all—the price. You would expect after seeing Volume I that you would have to pay four or five dollars a volume, or perhaps more. But you must keep in mind that our costs of distribution are very low, because these volumes are not sold by stores, or by salesmen who call at your home. This is the ONLY encyclopedia in its class offered directly to you in this way by the publisher, eliminating the middleman's or salesman's profit. You pay only $1.89 a volume plus 11¢ for packing and mailing. AND THAT IS ALL—for books you would expect to pay double that much and maybe more!

YOUR CHOICE OF REGULAR OR DELUXE EDITION

The volumes pictured here, and described above, are the regular Edition but for those whose tastes run to luxurious bindings, we have designed a superlatively handsome Deluxe Edition. The Deluxe volumes are bound in a heavy, pyroxalin-coated material called Sturdite, made especially to our order for this edition to simulate dark-red Spanish-grain leather. While Studite has all the beauty and softness of natural leather, it is at the same time water-repellent, and, as its name indicates, longer-wearing. Ordinary stains and fingermarks can be wiped from the covers, so that they retain their original fine finish even with constant handling. Genuine 22-karat gold leaf is used to decorate the spine, duplicating the effect of hand-crafted leather-bound volumes of another century. Title panels in black and deep green complete a genuine Deluxe set of extraordinary dignity and beauty.

When you fill out the Certificate, please be sure that you check off whether you want the Regular or the Deluxe Edition. Your Volume I is only 10¢ whether you want the Regular or Deluxe. However, the remaining volumes in Deluxe Edition cost slightly more than the Regular—50¢ more per volume—because of the more expensive binding.

But hurry if you wish to avoid disappointment! Send in the Encyclopedia Certificate TODAY!

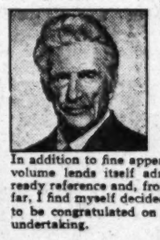
WHAT OUTSTANDING LEADERS OF THE COUNTRY SAY ABOUT THE NEW FUNK & WAGNALLS ENCYCLOPEDIA

DR. I. GEORGE PAYNE
Dean Emeritus, School of Education, N. Y. University

The New Funk & Wagnalls Encyclopedia is an amazing achievement in book publishing in these days of high costs and paper shortages. The old edition appeared to be the last word in the manufacture of an encyclopedia that was complete, accurate, properly arranged and with artistic workmanship. However, the new edition is more complete and indispensable for the American home and school. You are performing a distinct service in providing this new work for the American public.



BERNARR MACFADDEN
President, Bernarr MacFadden Foundation

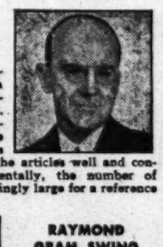
We are able to make very profitable use of the Funk & Wagnalls Encyclopedia which you so kindly sent us. In addition to fine appearance, the size of each volume lends itself admirably for quick and ready reference and, from the use made of it so far, I find myself decidedly up-to-date. You are to be congratulated on the excellence of your undertaking.

DOROTHY CANFIELD FISHER
Eminent Educator and Critic

I like the new edition of your Encyclopedia very much. The volumes you have sent me seem a wonderful value for the money. As I've already said in print and in talk, I consider the publication of a sound, reasonably priced reference book like this a genuine service to our American democracy.

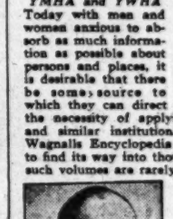
REV. N. S. ENGEL
Archdiocesan Director Catholic Youth Organization of the Archdiocese of New York

The proposed edition of the New Funk & Wagnalls Encyclopedia is a most heartening announcement. The early volumes have continued your characteristic mark of efficient workmanship, bringing to all, the complete knowledge of the world.



DEEMS TAYLOR
Noted Composer and Critic

The new Funk & Wagnalls Encyclopedia strikes me as an excellent work in its field. The paper and typography are good, the illustrations numerous and instructive, and the articles well and concisely written. Incidentally, the number of topics covered is amazingly large for a reference work of its size.



JACK NADEL
Executive Director YMHA and YWHA

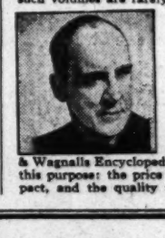
Today with men and women anxious to absorb as much information as possible about persons and places, it is desirable that there be some source to which they can direct their inquiries without the necessity of applying to public libraries and similar institutions. The New Funk & Wagnalls Encyclopedia is inexpensive enough to find its way into thousands of homes where such volumes are rarely found.

THOMAS MANN
Celebrated Author Nobel Prize Winner

I have had a good look into this rich reference work and am convinced that it will prove a very precious and helpful possession.

RAYMOND GRAM SWING
Noted Radio Commentator

You are to be congratulated on having the enterprise to publish a completely new encyclopedia, and to prepare to sell it at so low a rate. This is surely a useful undertaking. I wish you success in it.



DR. FRANK KINGDON
Noted Columnist and Political Analyst

In these days, when gigantic forces are at work in the world, no American home should be without an encyclopedia. The New Funk & Wagnalls Encyclopedia seems to me ideal for this purpose: the price is low, the size is compact, and the quality is high.

Cut in Annual Leave From 26 to 20 Days Debated at Capitol

A reduction in the annual leave of most Federal workers from 26 to 20 days a year is being debated behind closed doors on Capitol Hill.

The controversy over it is the inside reason why the Senate-House conferees on the postal pay bill refused to go along on a House proposal to increase annual leave for postal employes from 15 to 20 days a year. After the Saturday session, Chairman Johnston of the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee announced:

"We merely postponed action on more annual leave for postal employes until next year. The conferees were of the opinion that any change in the leave laws should be directed toward making annual and sick leave uniform for all Federal workers."

Other conferees revealed that four of the 10 Senate and House members indorsed a proposal to give all Federal workers 20 days of vacation a year. Several members also suggested that sick leave be reduced.

Most Federal workers get 26 days annual and up to 15 days sick leave a year. Postal workers are the exception—they get 15 and 10 respectively. A few temporary workers outside of the postal service get 30 days vacation yearly.

UNIFORMS: This problem has been postponed, too. The conferees promised to take up the matter of Uncle Sam supplying uniforms to all Federal workers who are required to wear them early next year. The House postal pay bill would have had the Government furnish uniforms to certain postal employes.

But the conferees discovered that there are thousands of other Federal employes besides postal workers who must pay for their uniforms out of their own pockets. In this group are forest rangers, park service people, immigration and customs employes, and the like. In hopes of treating all employes alike, a study will be made during the congressional recess of all Federal people who must wear uniforms while on duty.

ACTION: Conference reports on both the classified and postal pay raise bills have been filed. Chairman Murray of the House Civil Service Committee put in his reports late Saturday. He will call them up either today or Tuesday for final House action.

LEGISLATIVE: It's touch-and-go whether there will be a pay raise bill for legislative employes. Several key Democratic Senators are reported to have upset proposals for legislative pay boosts the middle of last week. But the pay plan was quickly revived last Saturday when several equally influential Senators appeared informally before the Senate Appropriations Committee to suggest a pay raise rider onto the supplemental appropriation bill. If approved, most legislative employes would get a flat 5 percent increase.

CIVIL SERVICE: Harry B. Mitchell will remain on indefinitely as chairman of the Civil Service Commission. He'll serve until early next year at a minimum. The Administration has dropped its plan to allow him to retire this fall. This is the third time the chairman has been asked to stay on beyond his mandatory retirement age.

POLITICS: Wesley Powell has resigned as administrative assistant to Senator Bridges (R., N. H.). It's presumed he will run for the Senate next year against Senator Tobey.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service exams will be announced soon for phone operators, $2284 to $2498 to start, and phone supervisors, $2724 to start; strategic material inspectors, $2974 to $6235; staff nurse, $2974; head nurse, custodial laborer and substitute garageman, $2150 to $2750 . . . The 2800 people here who applied for the information specialist and clerk exam will be tested October 29 . . . In the past 2½ years, the number of disabled veterans employed by Uncle Sam has jumped from 79,000 to 124,400.

STATUS ORDER: The Civil Service Commission has taken new steps to save the jobs of an estimated 5000 to 10,000 war service employes who are eligible for status under the President's recent executive order.

When lay-offs are being made, a veteran who is eligible for status will be classified as A-3, or directly behind status employes. A nonveteran employe will be classified as 4-A Plus, directly behind the veteran.

This Civil Service change is made retroactive to September 30.

Negroes Told To Unite on School Plan

Board Member Urges Action as Citizens, Not Merely as Race; Cites Cardozo Case

Dr. Phillip Johnson, one of two Negro members of the District Board of Education, urged his race last night to end disunity in school demands and seek redress as united citizens, not merely as Negroes.

He spoke at a meeting of the District Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, held at John Wesley African Methodist Episcopal Church, 14th and Corcoran sts. nw.

"It's easy enough to stand on the street corner at 14th and U sts. and demand everything," he told about 40 persons present, "but the way to get action on school problems is to attend board meetings in such numbers that will make the walls shake."

He said the District Board of Education is powerless to abolish school segregation because of an act of Congress which provides for a dual school system here. He told his audience the school board must abide by the act.

The board, he said, received only a small number of letters from the Negro community, these making about fifteen different suggestions and demands, while what he termed "the other side" sent in "a great stack of letters" with only three varying suggestions.

"We will fight your battles," he said, "but you've got to give us the ammunition."

One unidentified member of the audience took exception to his comment the Board of Education is powerless to act on segregation, asserting board members "are sworn to uphold the Constitution," which, he said, prohibits such segregation.

Another speaker, Dr. E. B. Henderson, director of health and education for Negro schools, urged an "intercultural education" program in District schools to teach Negro and white children about each other.

Congressmen Urged to Act On Home Rule

The Central Suffrage Conference of the District yesterday urged members of the House of Representatives to sign a petition that would bring the Kefauver home rule bill out of the House District Committee so the measure "could be enacted into law."

The request was made by Culver B. Chamberlain, president of the suffrage conference. He referred to a recent discharge petition filed by Congressman John F. Kennedy (D., Mass.).

Sponsors of the bill reported Friday that some 30 House members had signed the petition. However, 218 names are needed to bring the bill before the House.

In his telegram to House members who have not signed the petition, Chamberlain said:

"The Central Suffrage Conference, representing 50 community organizations with membership of hundreds of thousands of District citizens eager for local self-government, requests that you sign the petition filed by Representative Kennedy to discharge the District home rule bill already adopted by the Senate."

In a statement Chamberlain said:

"A handful of members of the House District Committee, by shelving the home rule bill, has prevented passage of a measure which passed the Senate unanimously."

'Snags' Lewis Gaming Trial Again Postponed; Dramatic Chain Reaction Set Off by Probe

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Today's scheduled trial of William "Snags" Lewis, reputed "big-shot" gambler, and one of 36 men indicted by a special gambling grand jury six months ago, has been postponed again.

Once scheduled for early June, the Lewis trial has now been set for November 2.

Although scheduling of a trial date for Lewis is as close to the trial stage as any of the cases have come, the 17-month probe of Metropolitan area gambling by the special grand jury has touched off a dramatic chain reaction of woe and conflict.

In Wake of Inquiry

Since impaneling of this special grand jury on gambling, first in the District's history, there have been the following developments:

1. Two sudden deaths—a fatal heart attack and a suicide.

2. One shooting scrape at a Maryland night club.

3. Two 100 thousand dollar slander suits.

4. A hot and cold love affair.

Less tragic than shootings and death, but nonetheless dramatic, have been the judicial disagreement, top level feuds, and low-level name callings, underworld squallings and masqueradings; the loss of hundreds of man hours in civil and criminal court arguments over technicalities.

Heart Attack Death

One indicted gambler, Garner S. Barbour, proprietor of Barbour's Newsstand at 427 10th st. nw., died of a heart attack less than a month after he was indicted.

Another, Walter (Sonny) Mason, 38, shot and killed himself at his home, 760 Newton pl. nw., six weeks after he was indicted. His wife described him as in poor health and "worried" about his indictment.

A third indicted gambler, Bernard Del-Negro, 2428 Tunlaw rd. nw., was shot in both legs, four months after he was indicted in a predawn shooting outside a Maryland nightclub.

Thirteen of the indicted gamblers were indicted by a rival Prince Georges County grand jury on the same charges, based on the same evidence presented to the District grand jury.

One of the gamblers, Atillio F. Acalotti, was indicted because his former girl friend, Bernice Franklin, talked to the United States Attorney.

A key figure in the drama, Miss Franklin is a shapely red-headed former waitress. She lost her job, then returned to Acalotti's good graces. Her present status awaits her appearance on the witness stand.

The existence and actions of the special gambling grand jury has produced three major feuds.

1. United States Attorney George Morris Fay, who supervised the arrest of the 36 defendants and says gambling is a 100-million-dollar business here, versus Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett, who says his department has kept Washington freer of gambling than most communities.

Ford Versus Rice

2. Criminal lawyer Charles E. Ford, who represents more than one third of the defendants, versus B. Downey Rice, former agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who served as a special assistant to Fay, and collected much of the evidence against Ford clients. Ford is suing Rice for $100,000 worth of alleged slander.

3. Criminal Lawyer James Laughlin, who defended Axis Sally, and who told Prince Georges County authorities he knew all about gambling in the county, versus A. Gwynn Bowie, county State Attorney, who tried unsuccessfully to get Laughlin to make good on his boast. Laughlin sued Bowie for more than $200,000 in damages.

Even judges found themselves in disagreement on issues raised by the special gambling grand jury.

District Court Judge David A. Pine ruled in April that Fay had no right to remove a Maryland telephone he suspected was being used in violation of District gambling laws. Fay launched a campaign to remove 326 such telephones.

District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff ruled a month later that Fay did have that right and repeated his ruling many times.

And Prince Georges County Circuit Court Judge Charles C. Marbury last week ruled that telephones could not be removed on the simple basis of a letter from Fay stating that he had evidence of gambling.

District Court Judge Edward A. Tamm, however, ruled that the same evidence Judge Barbury criticized would be admissible in the trial of eight of the indicted gamblers.

More official conflict developed in hearings on removal of telephones before utility commissions.

The District Public Utilities Commission ruled that the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. could include in its tariff a provision authorizing the company to remove telephones when informed by Fay that the phones were being used to abet violation of the gambling laws.

Although the Maryland Public Service Commission has yet to rule on the same problem, Judge Marbury's decision is contrary to that of the District PUC.

The lawyers representing the indicted gamblers owe special thanks to the gambling grand jury, and at least one has thanked Fay for the opportunity given him to earn large fees.

One defense lawyer estimated yesterday that the grand jury had created "about $50,000" in legal fees as a result of the indictments.

The lawyers have been in court steadily since their clients were indicted on April 18, to argue motions.

For virtually every defendant there were motions to dismiss the indictments, motions challenging the search and arrest warrants, motions demanding suppression of evidence, and motions demanding bills of particulars, specifying where and when the offenses were alleged to have occurred.

The box score gives the Government the edge in pre-trial maneuvers. The Government won approximately 20 fights when judges denied motions to dismiss indictments against that many defendants.

The Government lost two motions to suppress evidence, when judges ruled search warrants illegal. The majority of the defendants were granted motions for bills of particulars by different judges.

Much of the drama is still to come. Ford has said in court that he intends to introduce three records in the trial of Acalotti. These records are reported to be transcriptions of conversations between Acalotti and Miss Franklin in the former's apartment.

All the principals soon may be involved in the new probe of Washington crime and crime prevention to be undertaken by a subcommittee of the House District Committee.

Arlington Red Cross To Open Headquarters

The Arlington County Chapter of the American Red Cross will hold open house in its new headquarters Friday, October 21, from 2 to 6 p. m., according to an announcement by W. W. McCollum, chapter chairman.

The new chapter house, in use since the middle of last summer, is located on Lee blvd. at N. Trenton st., Arlington.

P-TA to Hear Giddings

Ernest Giddings, assistant director of the National Education Association legislative-federal division, will discuss Federal aid to education before the Charles Barrett P-TA at 8 p. m. Tuesday in the Charles Barrett School auditorium.

Persistence Pays Off, Too

Prize Winning Is a Matter of Sincerity, Says No. 1 Contestant, Without Temerity

Life seems to be a matter of surprises—and prizes—for such folks as the Bruers.

It may be wearing at times, but take it from Jack Bruer, "I'm not complaining. We never have to buy anything. We just find out what contest is offering what we want, then Pauline enters it."

Bruer, incidentally, is the husband of the new president of the National Contesters Association. He said he and his two children were used as "guinea pigs" by his wife, who has won a contest a month for the past three years.

'A Form of Insurance'

An insurance salesman from Omaha, Neb., he sat by quietly at Hamilton Hotel yesterday as his wife was named to the top post of the group, which met here over the weekend.

"I've been driving her to the past five national conventions, and eight State gatherings," he said. "You see, it's a form of insurance. We've got to keep up with the latest wrinkles of the trade or else."

As for all those prizes, Bruer shook his head, saying, "It's uncanny the way she wins things. Of course, we are never sure what's coming next, but then I enjoy opening packages.

"And she wins for friends, too. The paper boy wanted a pony, so she got it for him.

"At home our two children and I come to each meal, trembling in anticipation of what new product or dish she may spring on us. Then she sits back and studies our reaction."

Mrs. Bruer, who dislikes the term "professional," had a few words of advice for "amateur" contestants.

"Follow the rules to the letter," she admonished. "Eighty-five percent of all entries are thrown out because of some infraction."

Mrs. Bruer said that sincerity pays off when writing about things like soap, but that cleverness was the keynote to last-lines, slogans, and essays.

Stick To It, Too

Contestants shouldn't give up too easily, either. It's persistence, she said, that pays. She said, too, that the more contests you enter, the better chance there is of winning.

As to the other great class of contestants, the radio quiz show crowd, Mrs. Bruer said her association looked down their noses at them. "They are mainly exhibitionists" she said.

The 300 delegates to the three-day meeting came from 30 States to attend this tenth annual convention at the Hamilton, the same setting where 17 gathered 13 years ago to found the organization.

According to the delegates, an automobile is the "glamour prize" of the profession. You hardly are considered much of a competitor unless you have won a car.

The association, however, has other objectives. Mrs. Bernice Jay, 520 Ingraham st. nw., president of the Capital Contest Club, the host club, said the national group also is working for better contesting in terms of fair judging standards and distribution of contest information.

Eighty percent of those attending were housewives. One member explained it simply, "Some people go in for bridge as a hobby, we just like contests better."

In fact, the new second vice president, Mrs. Willamae White of Chattanooga, Tenn., accepted her post characteristically by saying in 25-words-or-less:

"Since this office on me you heap,
"I'll try to make you a real good veep."

Approaches Planned for New Bridge

Proposed Anacostia Span May Be at E. Capitol Rather Than Mass. Ave.

The District Highways Department is preparing new designs for the west approach to the proposed East Capitol st. bridge over the Anacostia River for submission to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

A plan for the bridge was placed before the commission at its September meeting, and the objection was raised that the bridge would interfere with planned Anacostia Park recreation areas.

Highway Planning Engineer Douglas S. Brinkley is drafting the designs for consideration by the Highways Department and Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, before the Park and Planning Commission meeting on October 26, 27 and 28.

The commission's development program calls for the erection of such a bridge at Massachusetts ave. ne. rather than at East Capitol, but members showed interest in the Highway Department report on the advisability of placing it along East Capitol. The report, based on extensive original destination surveys, indicated the bridge at East Capitol would attract a larger number of motorists than one at Massachusetts.

General Young told reporters yesterday the bridge is now high on the city's list of large construction projects because the need is mounting steadily. He said a start should be made by next year.

The bridge, which has been estimated to cost from 8 to 12 million dollars, would be financed by the city with matching funds from the Federal Government. The Federal aid program is scheduled to end in 1951, but General Young said he hoped it would be extended by Congress next year to permit completion of the bridge.

Funds for planning and beginning construction on the bridge have been requested in the 1951 Highways Department budget.

Alexandria Forum on Poll Tax Set

The controversial proposal to amend Virginia's poll tax law will be discussed tonight in a public forum at the George Washington High School, Alexandria, at 8 o'clock.

The forum, sponsored by the Alexandria chapter of the League of Women Voters, will provide a pro and con analysis of the amendment, which will be voted on at the State election November 8.

Speaking in favor of the amendment, which would eliminate the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting, will be Delegate Armistead L. Boothe of Alexandria and William D. Medley of Arlington, former State Senator.

Opposing views will be expressed by Delegate Robert Whitehead of Lovingston, Va., and Martin A. Hutchinson, Richmond attorney, and chairman of the Nonpartison Virginia Right-to-Vote League.

Moderator for the forums will be Miss Muriel Ferris of Alexandria, a member of the league's national staff.

The discussion is being sponsored as part of the State league's program to provide an impartial public survey of the referendum proposal, a spokesman for the group said yesterday.

The organization has not gone on record as opposing the amendment, as stated in The Washington Post Sunday, but merely is attempting to present factual data on both sides of the question, the spokesman explained.

Shooting Battle Threat Ends as Man Surrenders

Police Surround Apartment Here Where Visitor Was Shot Earlier

A threatened gun battle with police ended quietly yesterday with the surrender of a District man who earlier was reported to have wounded his uncle in a dispute over a drink.

Police responding to a report of a shooting in the 1000 block of I st. se. had to send for help but before reinforcements had time to reach the building, the man walked out unarmed from his apartment and surrendered to three policemen.

Lee Roy Day, 31, of 1018 I st. se., was then charged with assault with a dangerous weapon after his uncle, Arthur Day, 51, of 708 G st. se., told police Lee shot him in the foot because he had refused a drink while at Lee's apartment.

The uncle, who was reported in good condition at Gallinger Hospital last night, started the police action.

Dodged Two Shots

After he was shot, he ran downstairs, dodging two more shots from the nephew's gun, police said. He took a taxi to the Fifth Precinct police station, there told what had happened, and, police said, slapped down the bullet from his foot on the station desk to prove his story. The slug had pierced his left foot, police reported.

Four other persons who, police said were in the Lee Day Apartment at the time of the shooting were still there when the nephew walked out.

They were listed as Lee Day's wife, Mrs. Grace Elizabeth Day, her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Elizabeth Croson, 21, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl J. Akowskey, of 3950 C st. se.

Arthur Day told police that his nephew, who had been drinking, passed him a bottle and told him to have a drink. He refused and said he was leaving, and his nephew became angry, pulled out a revolver and shot his foot, according to his story.

Lee was still waving the gun as he left for the station house, Day said.

Precinct Capt. Thomas E. Edwards led three other Fifth Precinct policemen to the scene as the police radio sent out a call for one scout car and a police wagon.

First to arrive at the I st. apartment house were two traffic policemen, Pvts. Francis Raymond and Martin Smihula, who heard the call while patrolling nearby on motorcycles. Right behind them were Pvt. H. L. Faircloth of the Fifth Precinct and Pvt. Frank Hardesty of the Fourth Precinct, who had been cruising in a police wagon.

With Smihula covering outside, Raymond, Faircloth and Hardesty ran up the stairs. When they tried the door and found it locked, a voice from inside shouted, "What the hell are you trying to do?"

"This is the police, and we're coming in," said Faircloth. "We're going to shoot through the door if you don't come out."

"Go ahead and bust it in, I'm ready for you," was the reply, and Raymond went down to call for reinforcements. Fifth Precinct officers and two more motorcycle policemen were arriving, and the police radio called for another Fifth Precinct scout car and one each from the Fourth, Ninth and Eleventh Precincts.

Hundreds of people had gathered in the street outside, and police began to disperse them in anticipation of a gun battle. Inspector George R. Wallrodt, acting superintendent, arrived and took charge.

Burglars Get Whisky, Cash At Restaurant

Solomon A. Stern and Joseph Brenner, proprietors, reported the loss to Prince Georges County police.

Police said means of entry was not readily discovered and it was believed a skeleton key might have been used.

Several similar robberies have been reported in the same neighborhood in the past several weeks.

The burglary was discovered early yesterday when the restaurant employes reported for work.

Composer Sees City As World Music Center

He is Dr. Clarence C. White of New York City, who expressed his views on the "Americans All" broadcast on WOOK, sponsored by the Institute on Race Relations.

White noted especially the strides made by music here in public schools, in church choral groups and in popularity of concert artists.

Hot Fight Predicted On Zoning

A hot fight is expected at a District Zoning Commission public hearing Wednesday over a commission proposal to rezone from first commercial to residential 18 blocks on Seventh and Eighth sts. near E Capitol st.

The area in question includes property on both sides of Seventh st. between B st., ne. and A st., se., and between D st. se., and L st. se., and property on both sides of Eighth st. from E Capitol st. north to H st.

Zoning officials pointed out yesterday that only 14 percent of the property is now used for commercial purposes. If the property were rezoned, owners could continue operating existing businesses as nonconforming uses.

The Northeast Citizens Association agreed this week to fight the proposed change when it was estimated the rezoning would depreciate land values by one million dollars.

Other rezoning proposals on which the commission will conduct hearings include:

1. Change from residential to first commercial land on the west side of 17th st. between Euclid st. and Columbia rd. nw.

2. Change from residential restricted area to residential semi-restricted area land on the north side of Military rd. between 27th and 28th sts. nw.

3. Extend residential, 60 feet "C" area district, to include all of lot 1, square 2035, on the southeast corner of Connecticut ave. and Ellicott st. nw.

Crowd Hears Orchestra At Gallery

By Richard Keith

A large audience again heard the Gallery Orchestra under the direction of Richard Bales last evening at the National Gallery.

It seems a shame to have to report that the only music played that left any sort of permanent impression was composed more than 250 years ago.

The suite made up of music from the opera "King Arthur" by Henry Purcell, probably the last of the really great English composers, had a spontaneous vivacity and candid ease about it that made it sound more youthful than anything else on the program. The orchestra seemed to enjoy playing it.

Hindemith Work Pleases

The compositions by Hindemith, Finney, Shure and McKay that followed were, almost without exception, infected with that self-conscious straining (a sort of wooing of the muse with a club) that characterizes so much contemporary music.

Hindemith's Five Pieces, Opus 44, No. 4, are neatly and skillfully put together and are unusually free from the typical Hindemith cliches. The fourth piece contains some very nice lyric passages.

Pedantic Gershwin

Ross Lee Finney's Concertino for Piano and String Orchestra, played last night by Dorothy Parrish, is completely written but leans so heavily, both rhythmically and melodically, upon the jazz idiom, that it sounds most of the time like very pedantic Gershwin.

R. Deane Shure's Debussy-like "Mountain Lake Reflections" and George Frederick McKay's arrangements of three religious folksongs followed the intermission. The Elegie and Finale from the Serenade in C Major by Tchaikovsky concluded the program.

The Finney and McKay compositions were performed for the first time in Washington.

Center Fund Report

A report on the fund-raising campaign for a community center will be given at a meeting of the Garrett Park, Md., Citizens Association at 8:30 Tuesday at the Garrett Park School. A fund of $1000 to provide a community center is being raised.

One on the Aisle—

Maryland Barn Is TV-Mov[illegible] Studio

By Richard L. Coe

ABOUT THE TOWN: Now the make-believe people have found another new use for barns . . . There's a movies-for-television sound stage in what once was a barn on the Wilbur Baughman estate out beyond Wheaton in Maryland . . . Producer for this outfit is R. John Hugh, a 26-year-old who learned radio as a CBS page, worked up to directing and production, wound up as a producer with Kenyon and Eckhardt's agency . . . The gimmick of this new Hugh Productions, Inc., is to make movies for television and at the moment it's producing a 39-episode series, set for some 26 visual stations across the land . . . Local players are being used, more are needed . . . The series, which smacks mightily of what the smart boys are now calling "audio" (to you, me and 139,000,980 of the rest of us, still "radio") is titled "Penny and Pete."... It's about a young married couple in a "typical small town. . . . Clare Hill of the Montgomery Players, and Roger McEwan, once of the Pasadena Players, have the title roles . . . Actress-Writer Kay Todd and Maurice Higgdon, of WOIC, have two other parts . . . If you thing acting for a television camera is what you've been living for, give the outfit a ring AFTER 7 o'clock any evening at DEcatur 6400.

THE WARNER is polishing up its stage floor for one of the most highly-touted of recent ballets, Jerome Robbins' "Mack Sennett Ballet," highspot of "High Button Shoes," which arrives in condensed form at the 13th street palazzo Friday . . . This wild bedlam of comic fandangoes was headed for the National before that went Unnatural on us and if the trend pursues itself as trends so love to do, the Capital of the United States can look forward to seeing "highlights" from "The Madwoman of Chaillot" and "Death of a Salesman" sliced in between the movies at your favorite cinema . . . But the "Mack Sennett" stuff will be pretty much as it captured the first nighters when the Warner gets it, so come Friday, the Warner should be offering us all some laughs.

FIVE SHORT FILMS about the United Nations will be presented Wednesday and Thursday nights in the Commerce Auditorium, Fourteenth st. and Constitution ave. These free showings will be in advance of next Monday's United Nations Day, the U. N.'s fourth birthday . . . On the bill are: "Tomorrow Begins Today," picturing U. N. programs in areas of hunger, disease, illiteracy, conflict and wreckage; "Men of Goodwill," the story of how people of many nations work together at Lake Success; "Defense of the Peace," depicting the organic structure of U. N.; "United Nations at Work," concerning the International Children's Emergency Fund; and "The Battle for Bread," a report on the world-wide work of the Food and Agriculture Organization.

OLNEYITES of the past two summers will be interested in the group organizing the Mary MacArthur Memorial Fund, in memory of the 19-year-old actress, daughter of Charles MacArthur and Helen Hayes. . . . The purpose of this group of actors, actresses and other members of the profession, who met at New York's Hudson Theater last week, is to contribute to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis . . . Miss MacArthur was stricken with polio shortly before she was to appear at Olney with her mother.

THE OLNEY THEATER, by the way, will be used next Saturday and Sunday nights for a production of "Having Wonderful Time" as a benefit for the new building of the Montgomery County Jewish Community, Inc., on the East-West hghy. . . . Tickets at Shepherd 3436 . . . It's an all-local cast directed by John Coppinger.

FIVE HILLYWOOD companies, Paramount, Warners, Metro. Pathe and Universal-International, contributed to the series of documentary films about Canada, which will be shown tonight at the Interior Auditorium under sponsorship of the Canadian Ambassador . . . Widely admired is RKO-Pathe's "Canada Unlimited," made in cooperation with the National Film Board of Canada and selected for the Public Affairs Series of the Motion Picture Association of America . . . This is an invitation affair.

THAT UNIQUE group, the Count Vernon Players, backed by the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church under progressive Dr. John W. Rustin, this week begins its first season under Director Don Pimm . . . Dr. Rustin's championship of a drama department for his congregation (to which the Players' members need not belong) is exceptional in the ecclesiastical world; his is the only church with a fulltime drama director . . . There'll be a posh premiere Wednesday night for "The Rivals," which officially opens Thursday to run through November 5.

E. M. LOEW'S Open Air Drive-In on the Richmond Highway goes in for the unusual in auto fare next Sunday and Monday, programming "passionelle" and "Torment," from France and Sweden, respectively . . . "Home of the Brave" will be shown this week at the Apex, Naylor and MacArthur theaters of the K-B chain.

Mount Rainier Starts Parking Meters Today

Mount Rainier, Md., will place 140 parking meters into service at 8 a. m. today in the business section of the community.

The meters will operate from 8 a .m. to 6 p. m. daily, except Sundays and national holidays, except on Varnum st., where they will operate from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m.

Fines will be $1 for each violation. The ne wparking ordinance was adopted by the City Council a week ago.

Diplomat's Wife Shot

Mexico City, Oct. 16 (AP).—Karen Bang Host, wife of the Danish Minister to Mexico, was found dead in bed at home today. Police said she had a pistol in her hand and had been shot through the head.

Farm Equipment Workers Seen in Merger With UEW

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 16 (AP).—The Courier-Journal said here today a proposed affiliation of the United Farm Equipment Workers with the United Electrical Workers would bring together about 70,000 workers in the farm machinery industry.

Without identifying its source, the paper said it had learned the terms of the affiliation would provide that 20,000 employes organized and chartered by UE would become a part of a new council covering the present 50,000 UFE workers.

In Chicago, a spokesman for the UFE said the union would release the terms of the proposed affiliation tomorrow.

FROM SPRING GLADE, home of Mr. and Mrs. Lisle Smith near Vienna, Va., more than 300 horse lovers watched the Fairfax Hunt go out for the first time this season. Before that Mr. and Mrs. Smith entertained at their annual breakfast for members of the hunt and their friends. In the front row is Drucie Snyder, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder

Hunting Season Is On

THE ANNUAL Fairfax Hunt opened traditionally Saturday morning with a gala party at Spring Glade, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lisle Smith.

The 300 persons attending the event were representatives from official and diplomatic Washington, as well as many long-time northern Virginia families.

Set out under a 500-year-old oak tree at Spring Glade, the refreshment table was centered with a miniature hunter in a pink coat. The guests drank from stirrup cups and ate hot biscuits and home-cured ham.

At 10 a. m. Stewart Preece led the 50 hunters into the meadow for the chase. Among them were Bob Graham, Jack Howery, the host, Mr. Smith; Merrell Armour, Smith Bowman, Mildred Gaines, De Long Bowman, Mrs. Raymond Eaton, Mrs. D. E. Gallery, James Jeane, T. F. Jones, Carroll Hunter, R. Barnes. Riding with Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Coleman were their daughter, Vickie, and Mrs. Coleman's mother, Mrs. Arthur Snyder, who is in her 70s. There was also in the field a group from Madeira School.

Among those watching the hunt were Assistant to the President and Mrs. John Steelman, who seemed to be enjoying every minute; Justice and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Justice and Mrs. Harold H Burton and Justice and Mrs. Dickinson Letts. Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder and their daughter Drucie were there, as were Assistant Secretary of Treasury and Mrs. Edward F. Bartelt, the Attorney General and Mrs. J. Howard McGrath, Postmaster General and Mrs. Jesse M. Donaldson, and Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Charles Sawyer.

From Embassy Row came Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Norman Makin, the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis. Sir Sidney Caine and Lady Caine were seen chatting with Mr. and Mrs. Noel Trentham.

Also Gen. and Mrs. Clifford Lee Corbin, former residents of Fairfax; Admiral and Mrs. Lee Colbert, Col. and Mrs. Charles H. Deerwester, Col. and Mrs. Milton Lockwood, Col. and Mrs. H. S. Kimberly, Col. and Mrs Andrew Van Esso, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Barringer and their house guests the Theodore Waterburys.

Senator and Mrs. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, Senator and Mrs. James P. Kem and Senator and Mrs. William Knowland were there.

Still more on the list were Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Edward E. Gann, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Daugherty, the George Clarks (Senior and Junior), Dr. and Mrs. George Calver, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davidge, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Walton, Col. and Mrs. George Millholland, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mosier, Mr. and Mrs. Auguste Boaz, Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Spilsbury, Mr. and Mrs. James Baity, Mrs. J. Donald Halsted, Mrs. Julian Friant, Mr. and Mrs. James Craig Peacock, Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Kline, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Post, Mrs. Kettle Hydrick, Dr. and Mrs. Charles P. Howze.

At 2 o'clock hunt members gathered at Greenway, the home of Mrs. David Wing, for breakfast on the terrace over-looking the Potomac valley and the near-by hills of Maryland.

IT'S TRADITIONAL for the riders to drink a stirrup cup just before taking off for the run. Here, W. Carroll Hunter, Solicitor of the Department of Agriculture, who lives at McLean, Va., gets his from the hands of Mrs. Philip O'Brien

WEARY RIDERS, weary horses, home from the hunt, wind their way down the wooded road. Later there was a breakfast given by Mrs. David L. Wing, at Greenway, where huntsmen were served on the terrace overlooking the Maryland hills

Army and Navy Join in On Capital Party Front

THE Army and the Navy were partying all over town yesterday.

The 1915 class of West Point got together for brunch; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. E. C. B. Danforth, jr., leaving Tuesday for Japan, said "goodby" at Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse's cocktail fete in their honor. And the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Louis Denfeld, and Mrs. Denfeld were among those dropping in at Col. and Mrs. Gustav Villaret's pleasant gathering at their home on 36th st.

In addition former Minister to Panama, William Jennings Price, and Mrs. Price contributed to the party fare with a small luncheon for Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Smith of New York, and Nanking's Archbishop Paul Yu-pin, along with other prominent Chinese Nationalists, were entertained by Miss Genevieve Wimsatt at her Chinese home in Georgetown.

And now—taking first things first, the 1915 class from the Military Academy met, with their wives at Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Douglas Weart's quarters at Fort Belvoir, with Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Adlai H. Gilkeson, about to set off for Japan, also hosts. Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Mrs. Bradley were there, and Gen. and Mrs. Joseph McNarney, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas J. Hanley, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Stafford Leroy Lewis, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin B. Lyon, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Edward G. Wallington and Col. and Mrs. Raymond Marsh.

COLONEL AND MRS. VILLARET'S reason—if they needed any—for their party yesterday was Mrs. Villaret's attractive sister, Mrs. Lynn Quiggle, wife of Captain Quiggle, USN, who's on his way here from California to join Admiral Denfeld's staff.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Hubert Hoover and Admiral and Mrs. Royal Ingersoll were in the group to welcome Mrs. Quiggle to Washington, and others there were Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hendrich, Col. and Mrs. Malcolm S. Lindsay, Mme. Rybar and Maj. Kemp Slaughter, who had been to the Redskins game; Mrs. Rowe Saltzman with Nicolas de Gelon; Mrs. Bissett Norment and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nagle, Col. and Mrs. Robert Richards, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Ross.

Mrs. Edmund Wilson is perhaps better remembered in Washington as Mrs. Rushmore Patterson, who lived for a number of years on Massachusetts ave. She's here now with Mr. Wilson for a week or more, is in her home, which has been under lease, and which she is ready to lease again.

Lunching with Mr. and Mrs. Price and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were Dr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne, Mrs. Curtis Shears, Clarence Hewes and Robert Lincoln O'Brien.

ARCHBISHOP Paul Yu-pin of Nanking must have felt right at home yesterday at Miss Wimsatt's tea. For through her love of China and its way of life, Miss Wimsatt was influenced to build the only genuine Chinese dwelling in Washington. From the Fo dogs on its door step to the copper roof and k'ang—a raised platform—it is typical of the land in which she spent so many happy years.

The Archbishop, who has just arrived from Formosa, will leave shortly with a delegation of China's leading Nationalists, for a good will tour of 19 Latin American countries. On the tour and at the party is Miss Tsui Tsu-yen, only woman Senator, and the Rev. Shu Pao-ho, Nationalist Minister to Rome.

TOWN TOPICS:

St. Louis' Queen of the Veiled Prophet Ball, swankiest of all social activities in the town, is according to the papers, Carol Moon Gardner, niece of Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin of Washington. Miss Gardner is taking off her sophomore year from Vassar to rule as arbiter of all things social and civic in St. Louis. Mrs. Goodwin, incidentally, who's honorary coordinator for the annual Christmas carnival in Birmingham, Ala., has all her "princesses" lined up for the event which takes place next month and is to be called the International Peace Festival.

"Arthur Bradley Campbell Week" October 24, will fill the calendar with parties for this genial gentleman who's to stop with Clarence Hewes for a week before going to Palm Beach.

Mrs. Emil Hurja's tea Friday for members of the box committee of the National Symphony Orchestra, was to make last plans to get rid of the one or two boxes left. Everyone agrees that Gudrun Hurja has done a wonderful job.

MRS. PETER G. DOUNIS, before her marriage last evening at St. Sophia Greek Orthodox Church, was Miss Demetra Pavlos, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Pavlos of Washington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Dounis, also of this city. On return from their motor trip through the Northern States and Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Dounis will live in Washington

Hospital Unit Of Red Cross Plans for Yule

A special Christmas meeting of the Red Cross Camp and Hospital Committee was held at Walsh House yesterday morning to discuss Christmas gifts, trees and trimmings and wrappings to be provided for service and veterans hospitals in Washington.

Mrs. McKinnon, chairman of the Special Projects Committee of the District of Columbia Red Cross Production and Supply Service, presided over the meeting, which was attended by representatives of a number of local organizations, and individuals who participate annually in Christmas activities for the hospitals.

Nathaniel C. Wilson, manager of the District Red Cross, addressed the group. Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Gardner, field worker at St. Elizabeths, and Miss Virginia Poole, recreation worker at Walter Reed, described the way Christmas is observed at the hospitals.

Mrs. McKinnon's committee includes Mrs. William Spence, Mrs. J. G. Richards, Mrs. Joseph Lewis and Miss Edith Adams.

How to Treat Wool Against Shrinkage

I would appreciate information on the treatment of wool yarn and/or wool garments at home to make them antishrink and antimatting. If there is a chemical or a process you recommend, please advise me where I can purchase it in Washington.
F. G. G.

At the present time there is no satisfactory chemical or process which can be used in the home for preventing shrinkage and matting of wool. As you no doubt know, a great deal of work is being done on this problem by firms manufacturing woolen yarns and fabrics. As a result, commercially prepared woolens which neither shrink nor mat are appearing on the market. In time there is very apt to be on the market a chemical for this purpose which can be used at home, but as yet none has appeared.

Until such a product is developed, your best home defense against shrinking and matting is to buy good quality woolens and wash them by hand in lukewarm water with mild soap.

I understand that somewhere in Washington there is a club, exchange or something of the sort, where a person may take new, hand-made articles, crocheted, knitted and the like, to be sold. I wonder if you have heard of such a place and could help me in locating same?
J. B. W.

I'm sorry, I have not heard of such an organization. Since we have received several requests from women who wish to sell hand work, I'd appreciate hearing about such an outlet if there is one in the city.

Please give me a recipe for brown-sugar pie. R. G. K.

I haven't been able to locate this recipe. Can any of our readers help R. G. K.?

I have gone back to teaching after a number of years and find one of the books the children and I most enjoyed reading out of print. I have exhausted all the obvious sources and wonder if one of your readers has a copy she would be willing to let me have. The book is "Great Horse" by Virginia May Moffit, published by the Winston Co., for the Junior Literary Guild about 1934.
E. K.

How about it readers.

I am interested in finding where, either in Washington or Silver Spring, I can obtain a bulletin board made of cork.
C. M. M.

I was not able to find a firm in the city which sells cork for bulletin boards. You can, however, buy it from the Bangor Cork Co., Pen Argyl, Pa. They may have it in colors.

I have two souvenir sabers I wish to have reconditioned. One has a pitted, stained appearance with a few nicks in the blade. Can the pits be removed or abolished and the blade restored to nearer its original appearance? Can you recommend a place in town that could do this? I would also like to apply a preservative coating on them. What would you suggest? J. S. B.

A firm which does metal repair work can restore these sabers for you. How nearly they can be made to look "like new" will be determined by the extent of the nicks, but when an experienced metal repair man sees them, he can tell you how well they can be restored. One firm doing this work can be reached by calling Metropolitan 1134.

The firm mentioned above will lacquer the sabers for you to protect them from tarnish. Or, you can do it yourself by first wiping the polished metal with varsol to remove all soil and oil (work with gloves on to avoid transfer of oil from the hands) and then applying a clear-brushing lacquer. Brushing lacquer can be purchased at well-stocked paint stores.

Famed Ballerina Slavenska Finds Marriage, Career Blend

By Ida Jean Kain

CAN a career and marriage be successfully combined? Mia Slavenska, world-famous ballerina, is proof that they can.

Five years ago when I interviewed this career-minded young woman she told me flatly that she was not interested in marriage, that her career came first—much like the heroine of the song "Dance, Ballerina, Dance." And so, not long after, she married, took time out to have a daughter and is still going strong with her career.

And what a career! She gives as many as 75 performances a season. She and her husband travel thousands of miles on tour—and their two-year-old daughter goes right along with them. Director of her own company, the Slavenska Ballet Variante, she is also a guest star with the Ballet Russe each season.

Many dancers are far too thin. What impressed me about the Slavenska figure—she is ultra-streamlined at normal weight. This ballerina is 5'3" tall, weighs 118 pounds and has a lithe 24-inch waistline. She wears a size 10 dress.

"Having a baby need not spoil a girl's figure," she declares, "if she keeps a good posture and keeps active." Slavenska weeded an acre garden, an uphill garden. And she continued to give dancing lessons. Three weeks after her baby arrived she was back to normal weight, and started vigorous exercise at the end of six weeks.

"So many women neglect to take exercise after the baby is born," she explains, "and they tend to keep the same backward posture, pelvis tipped forward. Holding the pelvis in place, correctly centered, is most important in keeping a good figure."

Her favorite exercise for strengthening middle muscles: sit-ups with feet anchored . . . taken from the lying down position, feet under heavy piece of furniture, arms upstretched on floor overhead. Then, keeping a firm grip on the girdle muscles, come up to sitting position, continue to pull up with the middle muscles and go on over and touch ankles. Another: lying on back, feet on low stool about 12 inches off floor, and from this position raising and lowering alternate legs, knees straight, abdominal muscles held tight.

Slavenska advises anyone who finds it hard to start exercising, to begin gently with easy stretching and then swing into a more vigorous routine. "As you exercise, you'll feel more and more alive," she promises.

Like all other dancers, she recommends working out in wool tights to reduce heavy legs and make the muscles smooth and pliable. As for dancing making leg muscles bunchy—it doesn't, if the training is right. Done correctly, dancing makes for perfect legs. Slavenska's are beautiful proof.

Children's Bodily Type Gives Index to Their Average Weight

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

WEIGHT and height charts depict for the parent the average weights of children at a particular age. This average child weighs so-and-so, says the chart, and mothers, noting this weight, are perturbed if their own children do not match or exceed it.

It is more commonplace today to fit the baby into a channel of expected weights or heights which accord with his birth weight and height. He may be a small, fine-boned child, or a heavy, big-boned infant. It would be unnatural for their weight and height curves to be or remain the same.

By fitting the child into the channel in which he belongs, it can be seen whether, within this channel, he measures up to his potentialities. If he falls below the normal curve of growth, in his own channel, then it is obvious that something needs correction.

Mrs. G. B. is worried because her 3-year-old girl is so fat. "She is 36 inches tall," she writes, "and according to a health chart she should weigh only 29½ pounds. She weighs 40.

"This makes me sick, as all my husband's relatives are overweight and I have a horror of my daughter getting out of proportion. Friends laugh and say she looks 'just like her daddy.' My doctor says a few extra pounds are inconsequential so long as she is healthy.

"The boy, 20 months old, and this girl are still taking milk by bottle. They love it and never sleep through a night without waking and demanding a bottle. I have to use force to get them to take a nap, though they play hard all day. I would like your advice about the girl's weight."

I think you have cause for concern. The child belongs in the low channels of heights, yet her weight is in the high channel for 4-year-olds. Obviously, this is out of proportion and so demands some attention.

One cause for her fatness may be those bottles. She needs only three meals a day and whatever milk she will drink willingly at those meals. Stop the bottles; they are ruining her sleep. Give both children milk in their food if they won't accept it from a glass or cup, but try straws to see if they would inspire interest in it. Give them water at night when they waken—as a last resort give it; but not milk, by bottle. They'll outgrow their dependence on food at night.

LBK Club Wins Victory With Short Skirts

By Martha Cole

PAMPA, Tex., (AP).—The determined ladies are happy now. They are the members of the Little Below the Knee Club—that band of intrepid women rebels who swore two years ago that no French fashion designer was going to make them wear long skirts. No siree! or rather, no ma'am.

This year the skirts are shorter—right where the LBK women drew and held that line two years ago, about three inches below the knee.

"Personally, I feel we won our argument in 1947, and it has taken the fashion industry two years to admit their failure with the 'new look,'" said Mrs. Warren J. Woodard.

Mrs. Woodard was the young, good-looking Dallas housewife who started the revolution and organized the LBK Club in August, 1947.

"Three months after the club started it had 300,000 members and we in Dallas had received some 25,000 letters and cards from all over the world," Mrs. Woodard said.

Several hundred women marched up the main street of Dallas in their grandmothers' old pavement-sweeping skirts that fall.

"We don't want to look like this," their placards proclaimed.

"In the fall of 1947," Mrs. Woodard said, "the fashion association announced skirts had stopped their decline 13 inches from the floor. The club advocated 3 inches below the knee. But even though skirts went below this length, they did not reach the 5 inches from the floor length designated by the designers.

Hints to the Homemaker . . .

For a new kind of dessert, put a cup of drained canned fruit cocktail in a container, add a cup of sour cream and two cups of cut marshmallows; mix well, cover, and allow to stand in the refrigerator overnight. Serve chilled in sherbert glasses to six or eight people

Youngsters usually like a salad if it has raisins in it. Here's a raisin-carrot-banana combination they'll really go for. Pour boiling water over a cup of seedless raisins and let them stand about five minutes, then drain them well and chill them. When you're ready to serve put the chilled raisins in a bowl with a cup of grated carrots and a cup of diced banana, and enough mayonnaise to moisten; mix lightly so as not to crush banana. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves to six hungry people.

Rye bread or pumpernickle sandwiches are delicious with a filling that features ripe olives, ham, and cottage cheese. To make it, measure about three quarters cup of the olives, then cut the olives from the pits in rather large pieces. Mix the olives with three quarters cup of ground cooked ham, three quarters cup of creamed cottage cheese, and mayonaise or creamy salad dressing to taste. These amounts will make about one and three quarters cups of sandwich filling.

Celler DP Bill Passage Is Sought

New York, Oct. 16 (AP). — The Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons tonight called on the Senate to pass the displaced persons bill it shelved for this session by a 36-to-30 vote last night.

Earl G. Harrison, chairman of the committee, said in a statement that the Senate next year should approve the House-passed Celler bill—"and not mutilated and emasculated beyond recognition as the apparent attitude of Senator McCarran would portend."

Chairman McCarran (D., Nev.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee, now in Europe, had urged that the Senate take no action this year. In a speech read for him in his absence, he said the objective of the bill, named for Representative Cellar (D., N. Y.) is to destroy immigration barriers and flood the country with aliens.

The Senate voted last night to send the bill back to committee, with instructions that it report back by next January 25.

Harrison, former commissioner of immigration, heads the citizens committee which has been urging passage of the bill. The group was critized by Senator Cain (R., Wash.) during debate as a powerful lobby.

Administration Support

The DP bill, strongly backed by the Truman administration, would raise the number of European war refugees who can enter this country from the present 205,000 in two years to 339,000 in three years. It would also ease some of the restrictions on eligibility.

Harrison noted in a statement that a number of national groups—including the CIO, AFL and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce—have urged passage of the bill, and he said:

"Men and women of good will who love justice will deplore that a bare majority of the Senate still in Washington at this late date were able to postpone a final solution of the DP problem and once again send the Celler bill back to an unfriendly subcommittee.

"Thousands of innocent and deserving DP's fleeing communism have been left stranded, and we have left on our books a statute that is un-American in its prejudices and discriminations."

McCarran, himself a Roman Catholic, has denied that the present law is anti-Catholic and anti-Semitic, as President Truman has characterized it.

Harrison said further:

"There is no need for further 'study' of the problem, as leaders of both Democratic and Republican parties declared on the floor of the Senate during the recent debate. The DPs have been studied for four long years. Now action and resettlement possibilities are needed rather than further postponement of evasiveness.

Others Listed

"In addition to leaders in both parties in Congress, these distinguished men and women of all faiths, political backgrounds and occupations have expressed themselves in favor of amending the DP Act of 1948:

"Gen. William Donovan, former head of OSS; Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt; James A. Farley, former Postmaster General; William Green, president, American Federation of Labor; Francis Cardinal Spellman; Charles P. Taft, former president of Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; Herbert H. Lehman; Herbert Bayard Swope, editor and policy consultant; Philip Murray, president, Congress of Industrial Organization; Harper Sibley, former president, United States Chamber of Commerce; Gen. Lucius Clay; Paul Griffith, past national commander, American Legion, and present Undersecretary of Defense."

J. A. Foster Death Ruled A Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by Dr. Nelson Podolnick, Fairfax County coroner, in the death of James A. Foster, 58, at his home in Fairfax, Va., on Saturday.

Mr. Foster

Foster, former assistant manager of a company making small loans here, was found dead in his automobile in the garage of his home around 5 p. m., a 22-caliber rifle in his lap. According to police, he had been shot once through the mouth.

His wife, Mrs. Hazel Foster, told police her husband had been despondent recently because of poor health. He had been forced to give up his job as assistant manager of the Federal Discount Co., 418 Florida ave. ne., last April.

A native of Brownsville, Tex., Foster spent his youth in New Castle, Pa., where he attended public schools. He later attended the University of Pittsburgh and had lived in Fairfax for 10 years.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a son, Stephan; a brother, Edward Foster of New Castle, and a sister, Mrs. Ella Spicer, also of New Castle.

Funeral services will be held today at 3 p. m. from the Everley funeral home, Fairfax. Burial will be in Fairfax Cemetery.

Decorators Open Annual Conclave Here on Friday

More than 150 painting and decorating contractors from four nearby States and the District will open the second annual convention of their group here Friday at the Statler Hotel.

The contractors, members of the Capital District Council, will journey here from Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Delaware to join District members for the two-day meeting.

Twenty-six commercial firms will exhibit paint, wallpaper, sample wood finishes and color schemes during the convention. The exhibits will be open to the public in the Federal Room of the hotel.

Princess, 84, From Russia Is Dead Here

Princess Marie I. Sidamon-Eristoff, 84, a member of the Czarist regime who fled Russia in 1922, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles K. Moser, 3623 Fessenden st. n.w. She had lived in Washington since 1925.

A native of St. Petersburg, she left that city in 1917 and went to Georgia to live on the estate of her husband, Prince George D. Sidamon-Eristoff. The prince is now living in France.

Princess Marie came to the United States with her daughter in 1922. Because of her deep affection for her native Russia, she never became an American citizen and lived very quietly here.

The body is at the Chevy Chase Funeral Home, 5101 Wisconsin ave. nw. Funeral services will be held at noon Tuesday at the St. Nicholas Russian Orthodox Church, 1768 Church st. nw. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Besides her daughter, she leaves a son, Dimitri G. Eristoff of New York; two grandsons, Charles G. E. Moser of Washington, and George A. Eristoff, a student at Washington and Lee University; also a great-granddaughter.

Samuel A. Tucker

Funeral services for Samuel A. Tucker, 55, Washington correspondent for several Midwestern papers, who died Friday, will be held at 10 a. m. Tuesday at Fort Myer chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Tucker died at the Newton D. Baker Veterans Hospital, Martinsburg, W. Va., after a long illness.

Joseph H. Senir

Langhorne, Pa., Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Joseph Howe Senir, 79, of Bayhead, N. J., former member of the board of directors of the Standard Oil Co., New Jersey, died here early today.

He began as a tank wagon clerk in Philadelphia in 1885 and was named to the Standard Oil board of directors in 1927.

Allan Dawson

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 16 (AP).—A memorial service will be held Monday in the Episcopal Church of St. Andrews for Allan Dawson, U. S. Embassy counsellor who fell to his death last night from his office on the eighth floor of the Embassy.

An Embassy official said Dawson's body, which will be placed temporarily in a cemetery without a state funeral, later will be sent to Washington.

Foreign Minister German Riesco and Undersecretary Manuel Trucco presented condolences on behalf of the government today to American Ambassador Claud Bowers. An official of the foreign ministry's protocol section visited the widow.

R.H. McKinley Funeral Rites Set Today

Funeral services for Robert H. McKinley, president of the McKinley Construction Co., 1100 N. Vernon st., Arlington, will be held at 4 p. m. today at Gawler funeral home, 1750 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Mr. McKinley died unexpectedly Saturday at his home at 3916 Military rd., Arlington. He would have celebrated his fifty-fourth birthday Tuesday.

Born at Fort Dodge, Iowa, he was graduated as a civil engineer from Purdue University after interrupting his studies for military service in World War I. He was overseas in that war as a captain of Battery B, 139th Field Artillery. At Purdue, he was a member of the Iron Key honorary society, and of Sigma Nu fraternity.

Mr. McKinley worked as a civil engineer on a number of construction projects in the Middle West before moving to Virginia several years ago to found his own contracting company. The firm specialized in railroad construction.

Surviving are his wife, the former Marguerite Bushy; a son, Robert, jr., who is a student at Brown University, and a sister, Mrs. Jane McConnell of Richmond, Va. After the funeral services, cremation will follow, with burial later at Arlington National Cemetery.

Ramspeck Heads Flemming Award Board of Judges

Robert Ramspeck, executive vice president of the Air Transport Association and former chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, yesterday was named chairman of the board of judges for the Arthur S. Flemming Award by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Other judges announced for the award and the three certificates of merit given annually to outstanding young career men in the Government are Jerry Kluttz of The Washington Post, Joseph Young of the Evening Star, Howard Lewis of the Times-Herald, and John Cramer of the Daily News.

All executive departments and agencies will be invited to nominate men in the 21 to 36 age group who have demonstrated outstanding executive, scientific or technical ability which has resulted in a saving to the Government and improvement in public service. The award will be made in January.

Prince Georges Electricians to Study Inspections

All licensed electricians and electrical contractors in Prince Georges County have been invited to attend a meeting at 8 p. m., today at the Mount Rainier American Legion Hall, 30th and Eastern aves.

The meeting was called by Russell Padgett, president of the Electrical Contractors Association of the county, to consider the present system of inspections there on electrical construction jobs.

The inspections now are done by representatives of the Underwriters Laboratories, at Philadelphia. The meeting will consider a proposal to ask the Maryland General Assembly at its next session to pass a law substituting a county governmental inspection setup for the present service of the Underwriters Laboratories.

All the new sets, shown by the Chicago firm at a preview here, contain built-in antennas. Prices start at $249.95 for a table model with 12½-inch viewing tube giving 105 square inches of picture when the circular image is used.

Driver Ungrateful

Milwaukee (U.P.).—Henry Radioff, truck driver, thought he would make a few extra dollars by helping stalled motorists with a push from his truck. Business was good until one driver climbed into Radioff's cab, pulled a knife and demanded his wallet. Instead of making money, Radioff lost $35.

S. R. Brewer, Executive, Dead at 58

Scott R. Brewer, 58, president of the Allied Realty Corp., Chevy Chase, died yesterday at his home, 7804 Custer rd., Bethesda, of a heart attack. He had been president of realty firm since 1940.

Mr. Brewer came to Washington in 1933 from Louisville, Ky., where he had been in real estate and banking. Previously he had been in the real estate business in Indianapolis, Ind.

Born in Ladoga, Ind., May 29, 1891, he attended local schools and was graduated from DePauw University Law School, 1915.

During World War I, he served as a captain. He became a charter member of the first American Legion Post in Indianapolis shortly after the war.

In 1917, he married Miss Eda Bost of Indianapolis.

He was a member of the Scottish Rite in Indianapolis, Phi Delta Theta fraternity and Phi Beta Kappa.

Surviving besides his wife are his father, of Indianapolis; three brothers, and one sister; and three children, Scott R., jr. of New York; Robert G., 6607 Hillandale rd., Chevy Chase, and Miss Elizabeth Ann Brewer of the home.

Funeral arrangements will be announced.

"THEY SAY"
it's a shame that such a fine home doesn't have an owner. We feel the same way about it and are most anxious that this be corrected. A rambler, brick construction, 3 bedrooms, of course a bath—tile, a huge studio-living room, dining room, and an equipped kit. Basement plus recreation room, all this on a quarter of an acre in Virginia Forest. Priced to sell at $19,750.
"WE THINK"
this is a modest home at a modest price, $13,500, total price, $2500 cash required, the monthly terms to suit you. Now here's what you get: A brick Cape Cod, living room with fireplace separate dining room, equipped kitchen, 2 bedrooms and bath, and a stairway to second floor expansion with dormers already in. Matter of fact, the heating is already roughed in. One of the finest landscaped lots that we have seen and a great big full basement with a ping pong table, bar and rumpus room partially finished. Thomas Back After Tibet Accident

New York, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Lowell Thomas, Columbia Broadcasting System commentator returning from a hazardous trip into the Himalayan mountains, said today the rulers of Tibet want to know if the United States will help them in the event of a Communist invasion.

Thomas, 57, who suffered a broken pelvis in a fall from his horse, returned by plane from Tibet.

The country has an army of 10,000 men, he said, armed with weapons of World War I.

"I don't know whether Tibet would accept a United States mission or not but I think it possible," Thomas said.

Thomas said he was thrown from his horse at Karo Pass, 16,000 feet above sea level.

"The Tibetans have a saying that a horse that is a horse will carry a man up the mountains and a man that is a man will walk down," Thomas said. "I not only violated his Tibetan rule, but I probably offended Buddha. It is against the Tibetan religion to take anything out of the ground. I had filled my pockets with rocks that looked like mineral specimens. And I landed on those rocks when I was thrown from my horse."

Thomas said that he was carried in a litter by teams of 12 coolies, four at a time, to Gyantse, a six-day trip and thence to the Indian border, a journey of some eight days.

"As the coolies carried me in the little they sang a song, which translated means, 'Oh, Lord Buddha, Lighten Our Load,'" Thomas said. Their prayers were answered, he said. He lost 20 pounds on his trip.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 16 (NYHT).—The Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Newark has embarked on a circular campaign supporting Elmer H. Wene, Democratic candidate for Governor, because of his stand in favor of a bingo referendum, it was learned today.

Parish bingo games, long a political issue in New Jersey, are the source of financial support for Roman Catholic educational institutions. Entrance of the Catholic forces into the campaign on the bingo issue was considered a serious blow to the reelection campaign of Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll.

A meeting of 400 nuns representing teachers and principals heard the pamphlet campaign explained by Auxliary Bishop James A. McNulty and the Rev. Dr. John J. Dougherty of Immaculate Conception Seminary, Darlington, N. J.

It was explained that pamphleteering will not be carried on directly through the churches. But since bingo receipts are considered vital to educational institutions and facilities, the circulars will be distributed through schools, church societies and Catholic veterans and youth organizations.

The pamphlet, 250,000 of which have been printed, is entitled "The Bingo Memorial of the Constitutional Convention." Under the heading, "Logical Conclusion," it says: "If a Republican administration, Governor, Senate and Assembly are elected, the bingo memorial submitted by the constitutional convention to the Legislature is dead.

"The possibility of a referendum giving the electorate of the State an opportunity to vote on bingo is dead. The rights of the electorate are thus arrogantly denied by the Republican leadership."

2 D. C. Quartets Win Honors at Singing Contest

Two Washington quartets won first and second places respectively yesterday in a national singing contest at Harrisburg, Pa., sponsored by the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America.

The second-place winner is a newly formed outfit, the "D. C. Keys," led by Vincent Gingerich with Mickey Beall as tenor; Jesse Nussear, baritone, and Edward Place, bass.

Both quartets will be heard in Washington October 28 at a "Harvest of Harmony" presentation by the SPEBQSA at Constitution Hall.

Catholic Alumnae Group Elects Dr. Maguire

Dr. Bernice Wall Maguire of 1100 Clifton st. nw., a member of the Catholic University Alumnae Association, was elected governor of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae at the federation's twenty-fourth annual conference yesterday at St. Paul's School, 15th and V sts. nw.

Other officers elected were Miss Geraldine Nesline, first vice governor; Miss Margaret Harold, second vice governor; Miss Marie Schmidt, third vice governor; Miss Patricia Shevlin, recording secretary; Miss Mary Bowles, corresponding secretary and Miss Elizabeth LeBaie, treasurer.

Arabs Meeting Today on Iraq, Syria Merger

Cario, Egyqt, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—The Arab League will meet here Monday to thresh out policy on the controversial issues of the Syria-Iraq union, the status of Jerusalem and Palestine refugees.

Political observers said it will be one of the most important meetings of the league since the seven nations of the Arab world formed it in 1945. Four premiers will be present.

The proposed merger of Syria and Iraq has caused the biggest stir among the delegates. The Arab world is split on the issue.

Temporary Halt Now Reported by Greek Guerillas

London, Oct. 16. (U.P.)—The Daily Telegraph tonight quoted the so-called Free Greek radio, which broadcasts in behalf of the Greek Communist guerillas, as saying the guerillas had stopped operations temporarily "to avoid the total destruction of Greece."

According to the Daily Telegraph report, the station said that the announcement was made in a proclamation by the Communistic "Provisional Greek Government."

The broadcast was quoted as saying that the guerillas intended merely to cease operations temporarily, and would not disband their "army" or stop their fight against "Anglo-American imperialists and their agens, the Monarcho-Fascists."

Kensington Chamber Elects L. J. Paulin

Leo J. Paulin of No. 1 East Washington st., Kensington, Md., has been elected president of the Kensington Chamber of Commerce, it was announced yesterday.

A meeting of the board of directors will be held at 8:30 Thursday at the home of the president to formulate a program of activities and projects for the year.

Swedish Offered

Classes in Swedish language will be offered at Augustana Lutheran Church, New Hampshire ave. and V st. nw., beginning today at 7 p. m., the Rev. Clarence T. Nelson, the pastor, has announced. Teachers will be Miss Karin Peterson, Mrs. Walter Larius and Miss Alice Sundquist.

"Your mother said YES . . . a quick good-night kiss on the forehead!"

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Gen. Douglas MacArthur was asked about the effectiveness of the Red-indoctrinated Japanese prisoners released by the Russians. The general, in explaining how it was possible to indoctrinate the fervent Japanese, said that when men are in captivity strange things happen to them—that not 1 in 10 emerges normal. When these prisoners first returned they refused to see their families and were Spartanlike in their disdain. But then MacArthur ordered that they be led straight home, the warmth of the homecoming pierced the veneer of party-dictated aloofness . . . The case-histories of 4000 indoctrinated prisoners were recorded and checked, and of these 4000 only 42 are still Red party members.

The late Robert E. Hannegan traveled so much when he became chairman of the Democratic National Committee that he once slept in 21 different beds on 21 nights. When Roosebelt learned of this he said, "Bob must be doing reseach on George Washington" . . . When Republican Senators complained about the new kitchen and dining room Hannegan had installed at his Postmaster General's office, he replied, "Well, who won?" . . . He insisted that he never held a postelection grudge. "I have many Republican friends," said Hannegan, "and I extend to them my good wishes for the future—in everything, that is, except the right to hold public office."

George Jessel has some F.D.R. matches which he stole from the White House. The President caught him and Jessel explained, "I have a lot of relatives in The Bronx. How are they gonna get F.D.R. matches unless I steal them?" . . . Elsa Maxwell has completed her life story for film production and agent Felix Ferry is negotiating for the sale to the studios . . . In Groucho Marx's home is a stuffed lake trout which was the second largest ever caught in the Yosemite region. Marx proudly displays this stuffed trout to all visitors, and then he sighs, "I wouldn't have caught it if I had known it would cost me 40 bucks to stuff it."

Tommy O'Leary, Pan-Am's ablest steward, always is a member of the crew on inaugural flights. As soon as the plane takes off, O'Leary distributes his private list of rules to all the passengers: "(1) Keep your damn feet off the seats. (2) Don't ask such embarrassing questions as 'where are we?' or 'what time do we land?' (3) Don't ask for magazines, papers, or playing cards until the crew has finished with them. (4) Leave each crew member a healthy tip. (5) Always let the crew leave first (the damn thing might catch fire), (6) Don't bother the stewardesses. They're along for the ride. Besides, who's to entertain the crew?"

Pan Berman, the movie producer, sat in the Metro executive commissary and urged his colleagues to travel by plane instead of by train. He had just flown in from New York and said, "It's wonderful. You sit back and relax and a stewardess tells you 'that's Pikes Peak on your right' and 'that's Arrowhead on your left'" . . . "That's okay," Spencer Tracy nodded, "as long as she doesn't say 'that's Pikes Peak in your lap.'"

Decoration Set By Daughters Of Confederacy

Special medals for service in World War II will be presented at 8 p. m. today by the District division, Daughters of the Confederacy, to two living District veterans and, posthumously, to another.

The three include two brothers, Corpl. Paul Brenneman, and T/5 Carlyle V. Brenneman, and Mrs. Edna E. Epperly for her son, the late Staff Sergt. George Cahill Epperly.

Presentation will be made at the group's annual historical evening which will take place at the Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont ave. nw. Representative Boyd Tackett (D., Ark.) will speak.

Benelux Economic Union A Certainty, Belgian Says

Luxemburg, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Belgian Foreign Minister Paul Van Zeeland today said the economic union of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg will be realized.

Van Zeeland's statement was made here after a three-day meeting of Premiers, Foreign Ministers and other key Cabinet ministers from the three Benelux states.

A protocol adopted by the conference said recent currency devaluations will make the projected economic union easier.

The conference ratified the "pre-union" agreement signed at The Hague 10 days ago, which expires when the full-fledged union becomes operative July 1, 1950.

During the pre-union period trade restrictions will be lifted gradually to meet the goal of completely unhampered commerce by July 1.

The conference decided that from now on all commercial and payment agreements with other countries will be negotiated in common.

Free trade among the Benelux states will be introduced as soon as possible, in other words, before July 1, "except for certain agricultural products and goods from the dollar zone, on which controls will be retained for the time being," the protocol said.

This Funny World

"Now that you've said in French, 'Do not unsaddle the horses, the inn-keeper has been struck by lightning,' would you care to order in English?"

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Autumn Leaves

Throughout the United States these days, leaves are being raked into colorful piles and matches applied. The smoke curls lazily upward or whips briskly along in front of autumn breezes. And what fun it is for the children if the grown-ups are co-operative!

Can you remember the days when as a child you scuffed through piled-up leaves? Do you recall the thrill of rolling over and over in a particularly inviting pile? Children, today, enjoy the same kinds of simple experiences.

It's fun, too, to be permitted to lend a hand. The ordinary child is willing to help pile up the leaves for burning, especially if he can light them and keep the fire going with new armfuls. In suburb and small town, leaf-burning time is a time when all the family can enjoy work and play together.

Of course, the rabid gardener will shudder at the idea of burning leaves when they should be added to the mulch pile. But not all are gardeners. The pungent odor of the burning leaves, the satisfaction that comes from tidying up and the glow that's a part of good physical exercise are real values, too.

What's the Verdict?

"MORE OR LESS"

Q. X sold Blackacre to B for $15 an acre, the deed describing Blackacre as "51.3 acres more or less," the purchaser paying a total based on 51.3 acres. Actually, the acreage is only 48, as the purchaser discovered when he had it surveyed. He demands from X the difference between 48 acres at $15 an acre, and 51.3 acres at $15 an acre. Is he entitled to it?

A. "More or less" in a deed means each side takes a chance on a variation, unless there has been fraud or unless the variation will "universally raise the presumption of gross mistake." Where there is a description of property without reference to quantity, no allowance to either party is made even where the difference is so great as a fifth. In this case, the variation of 3.3 acres is not enough to raise a presumption of gross mistake, and there being no evidence of fraud, the buyer would get no reimbursement. . . . F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

It's a Good Thing That Love Is Blind

Jay Aitch is struck by the vast difference in the meanings of the words "vision" and "sight." He observes:

"Many a girl who is a vision the night before is a sight when she wakes up the next morning."

PERSONAL NOTES

Fred M. Sullivan, 1401 I st. nw.: You're probably right, but in recent years they've adopted the newer slogan to which I referred.

DOWN TO EARTH ITEM

Every time I try to save a line of space, I wind up devoting several times the saving to explaining myself.

A recent give-away item about a collie that was looking for a home in the country said: ". . . walks on leash, but needs more room." Quips Mrs. George M. Dove of 3503 Jefferson st., Hyattsville, Md.:

"Wouldn't he have more room down on the ground?"

CUT RATES

For half price you can sail to Maine
Or fly non-stop to Dover.
Why do they always cut their fares
When my vacation's over?

David Kandel
1311 H. St. nw.

STREET SCENE

Our reporter for this one is Jeff Baker of 1349 Kenyon st. nw.

It was like one of those Edgar Kennedy comedies, in which a minor irritation gradually snowballs into a major calamity.

The victim in this version was driving a brand new Chrysler. He stopped on the southbound downgrade at 13th and E sts. nw., waiting for the traffic light to change.

The jalopy behind him inched forward too far—then gently hooked bumpers.

In a flash, Mr. New Chrysler was out of his car, making a fuss about the incident. But unfortunately he had forgotten to set his hand brake properly, and his car was sliding forward, dragging the jalopy with it.

With an Oh-No-It-Can't-Be look on his face, Mr. Chrysler watched his left front fender mash itself into the side of a bus which had pulled alongside.

And as he struggled to control himself, he saw the last act in the tragedy. The light changed, the bus pulled away, and the open door of the Chrysler, caught against the side of the bus, was neatly ripped from its moorings.

I couldn't bear to watch any more. Fate seemed to be on a rampage, and it was no place for an innocent bystander.

LEND US YOUR EARS

The Washington Hearing Society, 2431 14th st. nw., has a suggestion for those of us who use hearing aids.

Very often we buy a new model, and retire the old one to the bottom drawer of the dresser or the top shelf of the closet.

Out of circulation, the gadget is of no use to anybody. But there are a lot of people who could benefit greatly from it.

The Washington Hearing Society will be glad to help you put your used one- or two-piece hearing aid to work.

Bring it in, any weekday between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m., and the society will pass it along to somebody who needs a hearing aid, but can't afford one.

NEW MEMBER

Mrs. P. Yahr of Beltsville, Md., on learning that the requirements for membership in the District Liners Club are two items printed in this column, cracks through with:

I hear by the grapevine
Your members are fun;
Please print this at once so
That I may be one.

TWIN BILL

Mrs. Arthur Riley of 2869 28th st. nw. notes with amusement the Pix double feature:

"Girls' Club," "School for Sinners."

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Wonder how long a fellow has to be a columnist before he starts complaining about lack of ideas instead of lack of space to print them?

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

SECOND SHIFT

"If Nate Leiderman's automatic transmission makes him shiftless," asks Bernard Kaufman of 1553 42d st. se., "does my old-fashioned car with non-automatic transmission make me a shifty character?"

Sure. We old-fashioned rugged individualists like to shift for ourselves. But the trend in the auto industry seems to be against us.

Oh, well—gear today, neno tomorrow.

In self-defense, I'll remind you that Oscar Levant says: "A pun is the lowest form of humor—when you didn't think of it first."

Listen to the District Line on the air Monday through Friday at 1:30 p. m., over WRC.

The Sad Case of the

Old Mrs. Swan carried her net bag everywhere she went. She was never without it. On her street she was referred to as "Old Mrs. Swan and her reticule."

One day the police visited Mrs. Swan. She was beside herself with grief. She had been downtown shopping, and somehow, had lost her bag. In it were her life savings she would trust to no bank. Her money was never found.

How foolish to trust life savings to a reticule or a modern hand bag. How wise to deposit savings in THE SECOND NATIONAL BANK where money is safe from loss, theft and fire, where it earns interest twice yearly . . . and where you can bank by mail.

Record Shows Navy Shifts on B-36

By Drew Pearson

It's a tough job for Mr. John Q. Public today to make head or tail out of the welter of headlines and accusations hurled for and against the B-36, the Navy and the atomic bomb.

Ofstie

However, to keep the record straight, here are some statements made by some of the same admirals before the B-36 controversery got so hot:

Statement No. 1.—Made by Admiral Ralph A. Ofstie to the House Armed Services Committee last week was that the A-bomb was inhuman, barbaric and should not be used.

Statement No. 2.—Made by the same Admiral Ofstie one year before, June 30, 1948, at the Aviation Writers' Association in New York—the atomic bomb is the "main shot in our armament locker. The delivery of the atomic bomb both should be and probably is a major consideration today in the war plans of the Air Force and of naval aviation."

Statement No. 3.—Naval testimony presented before the Armed Services Committee last week was that the A-bomb would do little damage a short distance from the target and that its importance was being overemphasized by the Army, Air Force and Secretary of Defense.

Statement No. 4—Early in 1948, Admiral Dan Gallery wrote a memo which for about a year became the Navy's textbook in its battle against the Air Force. The memo read:

"The next war will be a lot different from any previous one. It seems obvious that the next time our Sunday punch will be an atomic bomb aimed at the enemy capitals or industrial centers and that the outcome of the war will be determined by strategic bombing. The war will be won by whichever side is able to deliver the atomic bomb to the enemy, and at the same time protect its own territory against similar delivery.

"I think the time is right now," continued Admiral Gallery, "for the the Navy to start an aggressive campaign aimed at proving that the Navy can deliver the atomic bomb more effectively than the Air Force can."

Facing Obsolescence

Significantly, Admiral Gallery also stated:

"It has been assumed, at least implicitly, that the next war will not be much different from the last one. This assumption is basically wrong, and if we stick to it, the Navy will soon be obsolete."

Following the Gallery memo, the Navy did stage an all-out fight to take over the delivery of the A-bomb. This was what the controversy over the super-airplane carrier was all about. Two vitally important conferences were held to decide this question, and the first the Key West conference called by Secretary Forrestal March 11, 1948, decided the following basic policies:

1. Strategic bombing, in other words delivery of the A-bomb, should be the responsibility of the Air Force.

2. Anti-submarine warfare should be the responsibility of naval aviation.

This latter point has received scant attention, but there was quite an argument over whether the Navy or the Air Force should battle submarines, since most of the sub-patrol work in the recent war was done by land-based planes, and the Army with the civil air patrol had a notable record. But the Navy won out on this, and there was no further argument.

Persistent Admirals

Argument continued, however, regarding the delivery of the atomic bomb, despite the decision taken at Key West, the Admirals persisted. They were so persistent that another conference was called by Forrestal at Newport, R. I., August 20, 1948.

Once again it was decided that the Air Force should be responsible for delivery of the atomic bomb.

Eisenhower OK'd B-36

Statement No. 5.—Admiral Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, charged last week that the B-36 program had been expanded without consulting the Navy.

Statement No. 6.—In April Admiral Denfeld joined the other chiefs of staff in ok'ing continuation of the B-36 program.

This is one of the most significant and least known of the backstage maneuverings between the Air Force and the Navy.

Statement No. 7—By Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Sevrices Committee last April: "Persons within the national military establishment on the Government payrolls are endangering the national security through their effort to sell the public their own particular views regarding air power."

Chairman Vinson's committee has now become quite a soundng board itself with almost every word cabled to Moscow.

Religious Groups Invited to Talk At Neely Session

Representatives of the several religious faiths here have been invited to testify at the 10 a. m. today public hearing on the proposed Human Rights Commission for Washington.

The hearing, before the Senate District Committee in its Capitol hearing room, will also be open to spokesmen of business and civic organizations, Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) emphasized.

The bill is sponsored by Neely and calls for a 25-member commission aimed to protect and advance civil rights locally.
